WASHINGTON LETTER.

[Our Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, June 30, 1891.

The President is working diligently in order to get the executive business in such shape that he can spend Independence Day with his family at Cape May Point and unless something now unforseen shall occur he will leave here on Friday and will not return for several weeks.

At the last Cabinet meeting the business of the Government for several months to come was mapped out. The last silver act leaves it discretionary with the Secretary of the Treasury whether any part of the silver bullion purchased each month shall be coined into standard silver dollars, but as the mints will be kept busy for several months in coining the trade dollar bullion and the old and defaced fractional silver currency now in the Treasury as provided for by act of Congress, it was decided to defer the continuation of the coinage of silver dollars until fall. It was also decided that the statement of the cash in the Treasury should after July 1, be made in the form which was used when Senator Sherman was Secretary of the Treasury. This is a compliment to Senator Sherman, as well as return to the common sense meth ods which were in vogue when he was at the head of the Treasury Department, and it is generally commended.

Secretary Rusk has informed Senator Paddock, who was here in search of information, that he has unofficial information that the Governments of both Germany and France have decided in view of the recent establishment by the Agricultural department of microscopic examination of portions of every carcass to admit free of all restrictions American dressed pork, and he expects that the official decrees will be promulgated in both countries before the first of next October.

Every thing is in readiness for the official transfer this week of the weather bureau from the War department to the Agricultural department. It is expected that Gen. Greeley, the present head of the Signal Services, and several of his scientific assistants will for a time assist in running the bureau.

Much interests is felt by the scientific staff of the Agricultural department in the experiments which have been recently made here to produce rain by exploding artificial gases in the air, and they believe that will prove a success. It is soon to be practically tested in the arid regions of either Texas or Kansas, and then we shall see wheather science can control the rainfall.

At the close of business at the Treasury department Saturday afternoon there was a cash surplus on hand, exclusive of the twenty odd million dollars on deposit with the national banks and about the same quantity of fractional silver in the Treasury, $3,506,295. By adding these sums together there is a surplus of nearly $50,000,000, which doesn't look much like that deficit of which imaginative democrats have been making a nightmare for some time past.

For some time the Ordinance department of the Army has been trying to find a suitable carriage upon which to mount the new twelve-inch breech-loading rifled mortars intended for harbor defense. At last it has succeeded, and a contract has been made for eight carriages of the Russian type which has stood the recent severe tests at Sandy Hook, with a Providence R. I. firm, which control the American rights of the patentees. $11,500 is to be paid for each of these carriages for the first eight, but if seventeen more of them are ordered within one year they are to be furnished at $10,750 each.

Ex-Senator Ingalls delivered a lecture to-day before the Glen Echo Chatauqua now in session just above Washington on the banks of the Potomac river, and from the large crowd which went out to hear him it is evident that he has lost none of the drawing qualities which have so often jammed the Senate galleries in days gone by.

If the informal conference with Canadian officials on reciprocity which the President set for next October, is not declared off, which is thought to be among the probabilities, the Canadians will probably discover that they have not helped their cause any by making public informal communications between Secretary Blaine and Sir Julian Pauncefote on the subject, which those gentlemen had agreed should be considered confidential. The Canadians have also misrepresented Mr. Blaine in order to make it appear that the proposition for a conference first came from him.

A Sermon on Tramps.

As the summer comes upon us, with it comes the subject of my theme, the tramp. I do not mean the veritable vagabond who begs from door to door, but some of those unfortunate people who seem to have nothing else in life left for them but to tramp. Going by a lovely little stream of water, shaded by drooping willows, early one morning, I chanced to see a young man who would have been termed a "tramp." He bathed his face in the cooling stream and depended on Providence for his breakfast. Still he had not the look of the ordinary tramp, but a look of sullen discontent had settled on his face, a face so young it scarcely should have known trouble but should have been aglow with happiness at the idea of living on such a morning as this. As I went a little further I saw an old man sitting by the roadside mending his scanty wardrobe, a man from whom the morning of life had long since passed, yet there he sat homeless and friendless, and as I went my way the sun seemed to have lost its brightness. I could not help thinking of these people. Had they ever had a home and loving friends? Would they end their days in this wandering way? Did they long for a better life?

Thus musing I proceeded on my journey, driving by lovely farms and happy homes where want is never known. Arriving at my destination, I spent the day pleasantly forgetting my morning's reflections, and was returning in a happy frame of mind, when again its was my misfortune to meet two more of these unfortunate people, this time it being aged couple, a crippled man and his wife. They carried all their earthly belongings with them as they rested betimes by the wayside. The man said he was an old soldier and had no home. Whether he spoke the truth or not I conld not tell, but my sympathies went out to them in their lovely condition. Night coming on and nowhere to lay their weary heads, an old couple who should have had kind and loving friends to administer to their wants and a pleasant home! Wandering they knew not whither! Again the thought came to my mind, whose fault was it? Perhaps in their youth they had not been judicious enough to prepare for old age. Again it might have been some illfortune that befalls us sometimes that seems to be some peop'e's lot in life. But in this land of plenty every one should have a home and employment. Bnt who is to blame?

Ingall's as a Lecturer.

WASHINGTON, June 30.- Ex-Senator Ingalls made his debut as a lecturer at the National Chautauqua, at Glen Echo, near this city, to-day. His subject was "The Problems of our Second Century." His effort was listened to by a large audience.

VANVLIET STILL LIVING.

PARTICULARS OF THE SHOOTING AFFAIR AT WILCOX.

Louis Vanvleit, who was shot by Charles Sprague at Wilcox, Thursday evening, was still living last night, and slight hopes were entertained for his recovery. He is under the care of Drs. Mullhaupt and Hartman of St Marys; Dr Free and Dr Wells of Wilcox and Dr. Speeman of Smethport. The injured man is in a precarious condition. District Attorney Wimmer and Coroner Hartman took his antemortem statement yesterday afternoon.

The shooting was the result of a long standing troub'e, Vanvleit, who is a railroad fireman, entertaining suspicions that Sprague was too intimate with his wife, Vanvleit frequently expressed a determinaaion to wreak vengeance agaiust Sprague. These threats had evidently come to the ears of Sprague who lived near Ridgway, and on Thursday when he left his place of business to go to Wilcox he armed himself with a revolver. In his rounds about Wilcox he passed the home of Louis Vanvleit, who came to the door and made some remarks to Sprague who replied defiantly. It is claimed that Sprague passed on and was pursued by Vanvleit. Sprague turned and fired two shots at Vanvleit, one entering near the heart and the other in the left lung.

Vanvleit clutched Sprague after being wounded and grasped the revolver from him, and attempted to shoot Sprague, but friends disarmed him and took him home. Sprague gave himself up and was lodged in the Ridgway jail. Sprague is 22 years of age. He was taken before Squire Healey yesterday, and was represented by Senator Harry Alvin Hall. A hearing was waived and he was committed to jail to await the result of Vanvliet's injuries.

Sixteeners' Annual Reunion.

The Eleventh Annual Reunion of the Graduates of the different Soldiers' Orphans' Schools will take place at Reading, Pa., August 18, 20, 1891. These reunions are very enjoyable affairs, and are looked forward to with delight by Sixteeners, both male and female, all over the State. The different committees are hard at work and have mapped out a very enjoyable programme, having enlisted the services of the G. A. R. Posts, the Veterans' Camps and some of the prominent citizens of the City of Reading. They expect to make this reunion the grandest of them all. Full information can be had of Jacob A. Gramm, Box 547, Harrisburg, Pa, or of the Local Committee, Isaac W. Hull, Chairman, 217 Oley Street, Reading Pa.

Almost Disasterous.

On Saturday afternoon about half past four o'clock the cry of "fire" rung out in front of this office, and it did not take long to discover that the cause of it was a fire on the roof of the dwelling house alongside of Mr. W. B. Maitland's boiler shop, and occupied py Mr. Scott, the Brockerhoff House bar tender. As the fire was all on the roof a ladder was procured and a few buckets of water applied which held it in check until a fire company arrived when a minute's application of a stream put the blaze out, not however, before it had burned a hole in the roof. The damage will not exceed twenty five dollars.

About Second Rate.

The visit of Washburn & Arlington's show to Bellefonte on Saturday did not create a very great stir among the amusement loving people. The attendance at both performances was small and what few did go were tired long before the pretended actors. On the whole it was about the poorest apology for a circus that ever struck this town. The fewer of such shows that allowed to exist the better off the people of any community will be.

The Republican way.

From the Philadelphia Press.

The republicans of Tioga county were the first to declare against the further continuance of Chairman Andrews at the head of the republican state committee. Their action has been followed by the republicans of other counties. On Saturday the party convention in Blair unanimously declared for an immediate change in the chairmanship of the state committee.

These are expressions of the overwhelming sentiment of the republicans of the state. Nowhere among sincere republicans is there any desire to see the party organization continued in the hands of one who has proved himself both inefficient and demoralizing. It is a question of party harmony and usefulness in which every republican has a direct interest and in which no man's ambition can be allowed to stand in the way of the party good. Mr. Andrews no longer has the confidence of the republican people, and for that reason, if for no other he cannot be useful as a party organizer. For him to continue at the head of the state committee is to invite even further distrust.

It is useless to expect him to resign. He has announced that he does not intend to resign, but will serve through the coming campaign. It is not for Mr. Andrews but for the state convention to determine whether he shall do this or not. That body will have entire control of the matter, and if it reflects the popular sentiment, as expressed through the party newspapers, by resolutions of conventions, and by the republican people generally, it will provide for a new chairman, who will take hold immediately and conduct the campaign this year. That is what the Blair county resolutions mean.

There is no strength in the suggestion that a new man would not be able to familiarize himself with the work, accomplish anything in the short time left of the campaign after the state convention meets. The important thing is to name a chairman who has the confidence of the party, and unless that is done the party will go into the campaign seriously handicapped. Undoubtedly it would have been a matter of wisdom if the chairman could have been changed months ago. The work of harmonizing the party elements—which has been so persistently neglected—could then have been carried on, and we should now have nothing but the immediate details of the campaign to attend to. If confidence is to be restored the change must be made to take effect as soon as the state convention can act.

The resolutions of the Blair county republicans are in the best interests of the party; they are sustained by the overwhelming sentiment of what the republicans in other counties have done, they indicate the course that must be pursued by the state convention if the party is to enter with certainty upon a winning campaign.

Miners Will Strike.

WHEELING, W. Va., June 30.—Delegates from the coal mines of Belmont, Jefferson and Duernsey counties, Ohio, met to-night and resolved that they would strike throughout the three counties named to-morrow for the nine-hour day and what is known as the Columbus day scale of wages. About 2,000 miners will go out.

Notice To Fantastics.

Let all persons intending to join the fantastics on the fourth take notice that they are requested to meet in the alley in the rear of Garman's opera house on Saturday morning, July 4th, at 8 o'clock sharp. Let there be a good turnout and all be on time.

PLANS FOR A CASINO AND PIER,

VENICE TO BE REPRODUCED ON A SMALL SCALE IN LAKE MICHIGAN.

One of the novel buildings at the Exposition will be the Casino and pier. The Casino, which will stand out in the lake 1,000 feet from the shore, is intended to reproduce Venice on a small scale in Lake Michigan. Burlington & Whitehouse of Chicago have completed the design for this structure, and the architecture is of course of Venetian order.

The Casino will be built on piles and connected with the shore by a pier 80 feet wide. The base dimensions of the Casino will be 180x400 feet. The building will consist of nine pavilions, two stories in height, and, with the exception of the central one, 89 feet above the surface of the water. The centre pavilion will be 180 feet high. There will be communication between the nine pavilions both by gondolas and bridges. Completely surrounded by water this structure, with its fleet of boats and numerous water-ways, is expected to have a decidedly Venetian flavor. Surrounding the central pavilion will run a gallery fifty-six feet wide. The pier connecting the Casino with the shore will form a broad promenade. At the west end of the pier will stand the thirteen columns designed by Sculptor St. Gaudens to represent the thirteen original States. In front of the Casino will be a harbor for small pleasure craft. At night this harbor will be lighted by incandescent lamps sunk beneath the surface of the water on floats. The material of the Casino will be of wood and the walls will be covered with staff. A striking combination of high colorings will be effected. The contract for the construction of the pier and Casino has been let.

P. R. R. vs. Bellefonte.

The public must bear in mind that when they come to Bellefonte next Saturday they will see more than a parade and fireworks display, and one of the things they will see will be a champion game of base ball between the Bellefonte team and the P. R. R. nine of Philadelphia. This latter club has become celebrated for their good playing, being one of the best teams outside the National league. They played the Bellefonte am the last two seasons and were so delighted with their reception here and the skill of the Bellefonte ball tossers that they expressed a desire to come here on the fourth. There are now seventeen men in the club and the game will be a good one.

Fourth of July Excursions on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

In pursuance of the usual custom the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets for the Fourth of July holiday between all stations on its system east of Pittsburg and Erie, at a rate of two cents per mile.

The tickets will be sold on July 3d and 4th, and will be valid for return until July 7th 1891, included.

Closed Down at Midnight.

POTTSVILLE, Pa. June, 30—The Fish Back rolling mill, operated by the Pottsville Iron and Steel company, closed down at midnight. The men refused to work unless the company signed the western scale, which they positively refused to do.

—It is now positively certain that special trains will be run on the night of the fourth from Bellefonte to Coburn over the Lewisburg; to State College over the Buffalo Run, and to Philipsburg over the Bald Eagle and Tyrone and Clearfield. All trains to leave Bellefonte after the fireworks display which will be about 10.30 o'clock.

—At first it was thought to be the beginning of the great parade but on a closer inspection it was found to be a cavalcade of gypsies which passed through Bellefonte on Tuesday about noon. There were four wagons and about fifteen horses while it was impossible to count the human beings. They were bound for Milesburg.

Lafayette College Commencement.

The Commencement exercises of Lafayette College, at Easton, that closed on June 24th, were noticeable for the hearty welcome given to the newly elected President, Ethelbert D. Warfield, on this his first visit to the institution.

He spoke with force and grace, and won the immediate confidence of all listeners, as on the platform and the Alumni Dinner given by the ladies of Easton, he outlined his ideas on the management of a college, and his hoped as an educator.

Dr. Traill Green, L. L. D., the Acting President, was aptly assisted by Rev. William C. Cattell, L. L. D. of Philadelphia, who was for so long a time at the head of the institution, and who now, in the full tide of life and vigor, administers with marked success the affairs of the Presbyterian Board of Relief for Disabled Ministers. Dr. Cattell preached the Baccalaureate sermon to the Senior Class, sixty in number.

On Sunday evening the Brainerd Missionary Society, numering 156 members, held their anniversray in the Opera House and listened to Dr, Alexander Alison, of Philadelphia, on "The Convincing Power of the Bible."

The graduates in the Technical courses, of whom there are more than in any previous year, held their Commencement on Monday, and read these on subject in engineering and chemistry. The Sophomores treated a full house to an interesting dramatic display of "Calculus."

The Senior Class-Day was brilliant with music, merriment and a moonlight mass of four thousand visitors. On Tuesday, beside the Athletic Sport, in which many valuable prizes werecontended for, the Hon. Marriott Brosius, member of Congress from Lancaster, as Orator of the Day, gave a Forcast of the Demands of the Coming Century for Educated Statesmanship. Other addresss on the program were by Hon. J. G. Shipman, of Belvidere, N. J., of the class ol '41, on the State versus the Nation; and by Prof. Wm. McMurtrie, of New York, of the class of '71, on What a Scientist ought to Study, in which strong ground was taken in favor of the culture from the ancient classics.

Several hundred alumni were in attendance, and shows their enthusiasm in a practical manner by subsacibing to the endowment. Nearly one-half of the Fund of $150,000, sought to be raised soon, is now pledged. And the college will early get the benefit of the Fayerweather gift of One Hundred Thousand Dollars; thus reliveing it from the burden so long borne of insufficient income. The moderate tuition fees derived from 300 students cannot go very far toward paying the salaries of a Faculty of 24 members, besides maintaining the college property, now valued at nearly three-quarters of a million.

Fifty-eight seniors received the first degree: 23 received the Master's degree for advanced study, and three the degree of Doctor of Philosbphy by examination and thesis. The honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was bestowed on Revs. John Fox, of Allegheny, class of '72; George W. Chaltant of Pittsburgh Thomas R. Bieber, of Norristown, and Herman C. Berg of Brooklyn

Among the distinguished alumni present were Auditor-General McCamant, of the class of '61; Judge Kirkpatrick, of '56; Judge and Gen. Reeder, of' 56; Dr. W. Henry Green, of .30' Moderator of the recent Presbyterian General Assembly: Rev. J. Balcom Shaw, of '85, pastor of the famous Prof. Briggs, of New York, and Dr. G. L. Shearer, of '57 Moderator of the Briggs. Russell B. Harrison, class of '77, son of the President, was in attendance at the Press Association in Chicago, and thus detained from fulfilling his engagement to meet his associates.

The prospects of the College are quite bright. The incoming class promises to be large.

DIES ÆTERNA.

There is no night,
No darkness to enshroud
The worlds in sable cloud;
A shadow falls, and proves
How every planet moves
In sea of light;
One Day's effulgent tide
Flows on through ages wide;
Night is each planet's own,
And darkens it alone.

There is no night;
O soul, God's face benign
Is ever seeking thine;
God's love makes radiant day
While thou art in the way
Of Truth and Right;
Face thou the godless vast,
Love's light will shadows cast;—
The shadows are thine own,
And darken thee alone.

There is no night,
No night of death to bar
Life's all-transcending star;
O Love, why mourn apart?
The cherished of thy heart
Hath found the Light
That casts this shadow Death;
Life never yet drew breath
To tread the vale alone;
This shadow is Life's own.

A PULLMAN CAR WOOING.

Scene: Eastern bound Pullman car at the Oakland mole.

Time: 3.30 p. m.

Enter elderly gentleman, carrying small valise and large hamper. Following him two ladies, evidently mother and daughter. Daughter in dark blue traveling costume, with large bunch of violets pinned to front of her jacket; is a pretty, slender girl of about 18. Both laden with flowers, books, and numerous small parcels, which they deposit in a section nearest middle of car. The following conversation ensues:

"Gladys, dear, I am really worried over your taking this trip alone. Had you not better wait a day or so, to see if we can hunt some one up to accompany you?"

"Oh, no, indeed, papa. It was unfortunate that Mr. Wilson was taken ill so suddenly this morning, so that Mrs. Wilson could not go with me this afternoon, but you see I'll have to start to-day to reach Omaha in time for Clara's wedding, especially as I'm to be bridesmaid. You and mamma must not worry, for I shall get along all right alone."

In the meanwhile other passengers come in and find their respective sections. The engine toots warningly. A few more kisses and hurried instructions, and papa and mamma are gone. The train moves off, slowly at first, then with increasing speed carries her farther and farther away from the two worried souls she had just left.

Gladys felt a little frightened at the prospect of this, her first long journey alone, and kept her face turned toward the fast flying but unnoticed landscape, for the blue eyes behind the long veil were blurred with tears.

Her thoughts flew back to her parents, now on the way to their home in San Francisco. She knew how much they would miss her—the only child—though she was going to stay only a few weeks with her Omaha friends. She thought, too, of some one else who—well, some one who was also left in San Francisco.

Finally, turning to inspect her fellow travelers, she thought the few men and fussy old ladies looked very uninteresting. Thrown carelessly in the section opposite was a valise and a man's ulster, but the owner was not visible. She then turned her attention to the books, candy, and flowers piled up in front of her. She read, smiled over, and tucked away in her bag the cards and tiny sealed notes hidden in the candy boxes or attached to the bouquets.

Time passed, and with a reckless little yawn Gladys glanced at her watch and found it after 6. The porter just then announced that a stop will be made now at Sacramento for dinner.

Gladys thought of the bother of unpacking the neatly strapped hamper for just one meal—disliked the idea of going out at the station alone—wished Mrs. Wilson had come, then decided to dine on candy, as she was not very hungry.

At the moment a familiar form came up the aisle, and in a second a tall, handsome young man was standing near with outstretched hand. A gleam of amusement was in his dark eyes as he quietly said, "How do you do, Gladys?"

A delicate pink colored her cheeks as she shook hands, and answered him with a surprised and rather cool, "Why, Jack, where did you come from?"

"From the smoking room, where I've been for the last three hours, ever since I came in, and found you so wrapped up in the scenery you did not see me," he replied, moving some books away and sitting beside her in the most matter of course way.

"Where are you going, Jack?"

"To Omaha, Gladys."

"What for?" asked she suspiciously.

"Partly business—partly pleasure. Business, to take care of you; pleasure, to be with you," he answered concisely.

"Now, Jack, you know that is very foolish, after——"

"Last night, when you refused me again. Yes, I know; but you see I can't help being foolish. Was born so, I guess," said Jack resignedly.

Dead silence followed this for about two minutes. She looked steadily out of the window, while he gazed absently at the bald head of a man a few seats in front.

Then he broke the silence by leaning toward her and saying in a soft and persuasive tone, "Gladys, won't you reconsider what you said last night?"

Looking around nervously to see if any one could hear, she answered, "No, Jack—please don't go over that again, for it won't do one bit of good."

He looked disappointed; then picking up her jacket, said, "Well, we're almost to Sacramento. Come, let us go out to dinner."

Glady's rose quickly, glad that she did not have to dine on candy after all; and while helping her with her coat Jack casually remarked:

"You have lots of flowers."

"Yes, and these lovely violets—they came this morning with no card attached; but I think I can thank you for them," she said, looking up brightly at him.

A tender look came into his eyes as he said, "Yes, I sent them, and I'm much obliged to you for wearing them."

"Oh," said Gladys rather coolly, "I had no preference. They matched my dress so well—that is why I wore them."

"Yes, I see," assented he as coolly. "Those cream roses would not look well with it at all, for instance."

Poor little violets—that last remark caused their dethronement, for the girl with a flush hastily and angrily detached them, saying, "Come to think of it, the roses would be far more effective," and pinned a few of the long stemmed beauties in their place.

Just as quickly Jack replaced the few violets he had worn in his coat with a rosebud that she dropped, saying, "Mine are withered, too."

Gladys looked annoyed, but said nothing, and in five minutes they were hurriedly eating dinner at the station restaurant.

Afterward Jack amused and entertained her till the early bedtime, and she slept soundly that night, feeling safe with a friend so near.

Carefully looking from behind her curtains next morning, Gladys saw that the opposite section had been changed "two beds to two seats" again, but Jack was not visible. Half an hour found her dressed, waiting for him to appear, as she intended asking him to breakfast out of the well stocked hamper.

Presently he came in, and after a very slight hesitation smilingly accepted her invitation. He helped her unpack the hamper and set the table in her section, and in a perfect gale of fun they began their morning meal, sitting opposite.

"This is fun, isn't it?" said Gladys, spearing for a sardine with a corkscrew, for Jack, as company, was honored with the only fork.

"Immense!" he assented so emphatically that she laughed gleefully.

Emboldened by this, Jack, in the act of carrying a piece of cold chicken to his mouth, leaned over, and lowering his voice and fork at the same time, said coaxingly: "Let's breakfast together always—shall we, Gladys?"

She smiled in spite of herself at his tone and manner, even while a dainty frown slightly marred her pretty forehead, and she answered briefly and emphatically: "Couldn't think of such a thing. Don't be silly, Jack."

"Oh, you cruel little girl!" said Jack dramatically, as he straightened up and proceeded to eat the morsel on his fork.

Their merry little meal over, the rest of the day passed in the usual routine of a Pullman car. Jack was all devotion from first to last. Reading, talking, and eating, with hasty little promenades when there was any opportunity, was the order of the day.

Gladys acknowledged to herself, after bidding him good night, that Jack was a very pleasant companion—but she did not want to marry him; no, indeed.

Jack Hollis had known and loved Gladys Preston since he was a boy of 19 and she a little girl of 14. He had proposed and been declined several times, but knowing that she did not dislike him, and believing that "everything comes to the man who waits," he was waiting, and in the meantime wooing to the best of his ability.

He was very much afraid she would meet some other man during her visit who would fall in love with her and win her; hence his deep laid scheme to travel to Omaha with her. As for Gladys, after her first surprise at seeing him on board, she was so used to his never failing devotion that she took his coming with her as a matter of course. It was just like Jack, she thought.

The second morning Gladys arose with a severe headache. With that and a wretched night's sleep she was worn out and cross—undeniably so. She snubbed poor Jack, who was all sympathy; refused the cup of tea he brought her when they changed cars at Ogden; and when the journey began again she lay back on the pillows he fixed in the seat for her, and would have nothing to say to him.

All day she suffered intensely, feigning sleep most of the time to avoid being fussed over by the sympathetic old ladies.

How Jack longed to take the golden brown head in his arms and stroke the throbbing temples. Toward evening, when the rest of the passengers were out at dinner, he asked her with a passionate tremor in his voice to give him the right.

She was trying to swallow the tea he had again brought in to her. Pushing it away, she said angrily:

"Jack, you bother me to death. Don't ever mention that subject to me again, for I will not marry you. Go away, and don't speak to me at all." Then the aching head dropped wearily back on the pillow.

Jack paled, took the half emptied cup, and walked silently out of the car. That was the last she saw of him that night. She had her berth made up early, and, utterly exhausted, soon fell into a refreshing sleep, from which she awoke in the night with the headache gone.

Her first thought was of Jack, and her eyes opened wide with shame as she remembered her rudeness to the man who had always been so kind to her. She recalled the pained, set look, as he had turned away the evening before, and resolved to ask his pardon the first thing in the morning, when of course he would forgive her and they would be good friends again.

Morning found Gladys herself again, sweet and pretty as ever; but no Jack to be seen. He had not come in to take breakfast with her, as she expected, so she decided he must have eaten at the station which had been passed early, before she was up.

After a lonely little breakfast by herself, she settled down comfortably with a book to read and wait for him to come and make up.

The hours passed, however, and still no Jack. His traps were still opposite, so he must be on the train, probably in the smoking room, where the other men spent most of their time. She began to grow very indignant at his neglect.

"To be sure, I told him never to speak to me again, but he knew I did not mean it," soliloquized Gladys; then tossed her head and vowed she didn't care what he did.

At luncheon time she saw him disappear in the eating room without so much as a look even in her direction. Shortly after the train moved he sauntered carelessly in to his section. Meeting her wondering eyes he gravely bowed, then taking a book, was to all intents soon absorbed in its contents.

Her heart seemed to sink a few inches as she fully realized that he had taken her hasty words literally, and did not intend speaking to her. But pride came to her rescue, and she was apparently as much interested in her work as he was in his.

The afternoon rolled on, and still they read, never glancing at each other. As the train drew up at the dinner station he threw down his book, and without a word to the girl across the aisle went out talking and laughing with one of the men.

Gladys, who had not left the car that day, timidly asked the old ladies if she could go out to dinner with them, and was promptly taken under their wing. After dinner, Jack stayed in the smoking room playing cards.

Then as the shadows darkened so that she could not see to read, Glady's spirits fell to the lowest ebb. Turning to the window, but seeing nothing of the fast darkening landscape, she gazed steadily out with fast filling eyes. She realized and confessed then to herself how much she had missed Jack all day.

On the train flew into the darkness. The car lamps were lit, and berths were being made up all around her. More and more lonely and low spirited she grew. To-morrow morning would bring them to Omaha, where her friends would meet her. She would go one way, Jack another, and he would never speak to her again. The last thought was too much for her, and by this time she was crying softly but bitterly in the corner, with her face still turned to the window.

Ah, Jack, deliberately staying away all day from willful little Gladys was a diplomatic stroke of yours!

Suddenly some one leaned over her and said softly: "Why, Gladys, homesick already?"

Startled, she turned quickly, and with a joyful little catch of her breath dashed her handkerchief over her eyes, and answered shyly: "No, Jack, only lonesome, and I—I'm sorry I was so rude yesterday."

He sat down, screening her from any prying eyes, and said very low: "Gladys, darling, were you crying because I've been such an unmanly beast to-day?"

The pretty head dropped lower—but no answer. Jack glanced around; no one was looking. Taking her hand, he said: "Gladys, once more I ask you to be my wife. If you say 'no' I shall never trouble you again, but shall take the first train home from Omaha to-morrow, a disappointed man. Which is it, dear; yes or no?"

Still no answer.

"Say yes, dearest," pleaded Jack, with his lips dangerously near the fluffy bangs.

An almost imperceptible nod was all the answer he got, but it seemed to satisfy him. Gently raising her head, he stole a kiss, just in time to escape the porter's inquisitive eyes as he came up, blandly asking the young lady if she was ready to have her berth made up.

Blushing furiously, the young lady said yes, she was ready; so pressing her hand warmly, Jack whispered: "Good night, love," and left her, well satisfied with the result of his journey.—[Jessie Howell Hull, in the Overland.

Fresh Water Commerce.

Probably there are few people whose attention has not been specially directed to the subject who are aware of the magnitude of the commerce upon the great lakes.

It has been asserted that more tons of freight pass through the Detroit River in a year than the total imports and exports of the United States for the same period.

The commerce of the great lakes is carried upon more than 2,000 vessels, of which more than half are propelled by steam.

About 600 schooners, some of them great four masted craft, ply on the lakes during the five or six months when the straits and ports are not closed by ice. Many more are small schooners, and of these a large number, on the upper lakes, are owned and manned by hardy Norwegian sailors, who have emigrated to this country.

Steam is gradually displacing the wind as the motive power of the lake traffic, and steel is displacing wood as a material. The steam vessels, too, are constantly increasing in size. In 1886 there were but six steel vessels on the great lakes; in 1890 there were 68.

At the same time that these changes in the size and material of vessels are taking place, a change is going on in their ownership. There is a smaller proportion of vessels owned by individuals or small partnerships. The traffic of the lakes is rapidly coming under the control of corporations possessing large capital.

The two great items of freight in the vast traffic of the great lakes are ore and grain. Many millions of tons of ore are yearly brought through the Sault Ste. Marie Canal down the lakes. Seventy million bushels of wheat and 4,000,000 bushels of flour go annually by water to Buffalo. The corn tonnage is still larger.

Yet the great lakes are closed to navigation during at least six months of the year, and winters have been known when lakes Superior and Michigan were frozen from shore to shore.

A Growing Revenue.

The internal revenue receipts of the United States for the first nine months of the current fiscal year are greater by $7,000,000 than for the same time 12 months previously, and considerably in excess of the estimates. If the same rate be kept up to the end the receipts of the fiscal year will exceed $150,000,000 for the first time in two decades. For the year ending with last June the total was $142,500,000, against $130,800,000 for 1889.

Some idea of the foreign population of Chicago may be gained from the fact that of 172,756 voters who registered last autumn 88,247 were naturalized citizens.

A CUBAN MOON.

"The ugliest woman I ever saw," said the raconteur, "was a Cuban, and she was so ugly that it was really painful to look at her."

"It takes the exception to prove the rule," said his vis a vis. "Tell us about her."

"She was a woman of the humbler class, and it was at Havana that I first saw her, tethered to a goat that she was herding among the stubble of the sugar cane. Her husband was a charcoal burner, and when I first saw Estella, I wondered how any man living could have married such a carfcature."

"Love goes where it is sent," said one of the after dinner crowd.

"Yes, and the charcoal burner married for love. But he never would have won Estella if a wrathful Providence had not favored him. The Cubana had once been the most beautiful girl in Havana, and as good as she was beautiful. Her eyes were big pools of black, her skin a glowing olive and her hair a mass of blue black silk. That is what an old dame told me who much admired him. Her father was a boatman—a man who kept a wine cellar. The girl's mother was dead. One night her father went home drunker than usual and turned her out of doors——"

"Brute," exclaimed one of the party, with that quick sympathy that the sorrows of beauty always arouses.

"She did not go to her lover, nor did she fly to the refuge of some adobe roof where she had friends. She simply pillowed her head upon the gray donkey, that had been her friend and playmate from childhood, where he slept against the tumbled in thatched roof of the pen in the chaparral, prayed to the Black Madonna, and slept soundly like a child in the moonlight."

"And the brigands came and carried her off to their fastnesses?" suggested one of the party.

"Nothing of the kind. When her pillow, the little donkey, rolled over in the morning she arose another person. She ran into the house and her father screamed 'Sancta Maria!' and drove her out as a stranger. She had slept in the Cuban moonlight, the fairest moonlight in the world, but as deadly as the shawow of the upas tree. Her face was drawn out of all shape resembling a human being. It was the horrible, distorted mask that I saw, with the features of an imbecile. Her father drove her from him with curses, but the lover with whom she had coquetted married her at once, and they told me he had made her a good husband.

"But you will hear the Cuban mother calling her young daughter into the house when the full moonlight is flooding the balconies with its silver light, and the light seems made for lovers to wander in, for everybody there knows the story of Estella."

There was a long silence, then one of the listeners said:

"I don't believe in that theory of the moon. It makes a pretty story, but it's too romantic."

"It's a matter of history; take it or leave it," said the raconteur, blowing blue rings of smoke upward, a sign that he had finished his post prandial exercises.

Kitty, the Apple Woman of Piccadilly.

One of the best known characters in London is dead after a career which, though simple, as the annals of the poor usually are, was in many ways extraordinary. This was Kitty, the famous old apple woman of Piccadilly. Kitty was a little old maid, the oldest maid in the world, without a doubt, as the age marked on her burial certificate was 104 years. She had sold apples on Piccadilly, in almost the same spot, for half a century, and before that time had sold apples somewhere else. Thousands of visitors to London in the last half century will remember the little bright eyed, bright faced manikin, always ready with apples or oranges and always grateful for a penny. Kitty long since ceased to be a fruit merchant and proudly occupied the position of a public curiosity. About her 100th year her eyes began to give out, and since then she has been failing. A short time ago she ceased to appear in her customary seat, and soon afterward died in a little room in Clare street, off Leicester Square. Kitty is missed in Piccadilly. In perhaps the hottest corner of this nineteenth century, Babylon, surrounded nightly by the ebb and flow of a mad world's feverish tide of wickedness, Kitty's face was a spot of brightness and goodness that always made one stare.—[London Correspondent New York Recorder.

Railroads in Switzerland.

A great amount of railroad building is going on all over Switzerland, sparing no mountain, no valley, and it is surprising to find that this most difficult of all countries for railroad engineering should possess relatively more railways than the New England States. In the latter there is one kilometer of railways to every 17 square kilometers of land; in Switzerland, one to every 13 square kilometers. In other words, the New England States are four and a half times larger than Switzerland, and have but three times more railroads, although in Switzerland one-half the country is occupied by the highest mountain ranges of Europe. The receipts average in the New England States about $3,000 a year per kilometer; in Switzerland, $5,500, which difference is mainly due to summer travel.

Dividing the Estate of an Ex-President.

Four nephews of ex-President Fillmore were at the Tifft House, Buffalo, recently. A dispatch says "they were typical farmers, and of the most pronounced 'Hoosier' stamp." Their mission was a sort of family reunion of the heirs of President Millard Fillmore. The Fillmore estate is worth about $300,000, and it is to be divided among 11 persons, five of whom live in Michigan, three in Indiana, two in Washington, and one in California. Those who were in Buffalo at the time indicated were George M., Benjamin F., Almon L., and Millard C. Fillmore. The other heirs, with the exception of one, were soon to present themselves for the final settlement of the estate in the surrogate's court.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

The Universities' Mission in Central Africa, which now has 2,000 adherents, is rejoicing in the ordination of its first native priest.

The Synod of Kentucky expended last year over $18,000 in evangelistic work, with large results, and will raise a larger sum this year.

Pure religion, wrote Chatfield, may generally be measured by the cheerfulness of its professors, and superstition by the gloom of its victims.

The tremendous pounding of the quartz mills does not destroy nor in the least injure the gold. They only free it from the silex. So of pure religious truth.

The Icelandic Lutheran congregations in Manitoba and the Northwestern States recently celebrated the 350th anniversary of the translation of the scriptures into Icelandic.

According to Dr. W. H. Roberts, American statistical secretary of the Presbyterian Alliance, the Presbyterian and Reformed denominations throughout the world have 20,355,500 adherents.

Death keeps its own secrets and takes nobody into its confidence. What it is to die we can actually know only by dying, and the knowledge thus gained we can never give to those whom we have left behind us.

In Africa the number of missionaries exceeds 500, and the number of converts 400,000, increasing by about 25,000 a year. During the past five years Africa has furnished more than 200 martyrs.—[Christian Union.

Yearly returns of the Welsh Calvinists for 1890 show a communicants' roll of 132,354, an increase during the last 10 years of 42,000. This includes the Welsh churches in London, Liverpool, Manchester, and other parts of England.

We need to learn faith in God's plan for human nature. He will shape things, and our plans will be constant turmoil until in America and everywhere else men will be something beside a creature. God will have him son of the eternal God.

A copy of the bible was sold in New York the other day for $14,800. This was not because it contained any more truth than any other copy, but because it was printed by Guttenberg in 1455—the first complete book ever printed with movable type.

These are the figures which the Methodist Episcopal Advocate, of Portland, gives concerning the relative standing of the churches in Oregon: Methodist societies, 211, members 10,050; Baptist, 106, 5,043; Presbyterian, 70, 3,575; Episcopal, 22, 1,600; Congregational 29, 1,619.

There are 21 theological schools in Japan, with 350 students, showing an increase of 4 schools and 75 students. The number of unordained preachers and helpers is 455, an increase of 46. The total contributions of native Christians was 69,325 yen, against 53,503 yen in 1889. The value of a yen is about 83 cents in gold.

The deaconess movement is spreading. In connection with the Baptist forward movement, a new Deaconesses' Home was recently opened in London. Ladies will be trained in nursing and other work among the poor, and will be placed under the direction of such churches as may desire their aid.—[Illustrated Christian Weekly.

The Louisiana conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South reports 231 church edifices, valued at $433,000, and 58 parsonages, valued at $30,114. They also report 90 local preachers, with 20,025 white and 8 colored members; 216 Sunday schools, with 1,299 teachers and 8,499 scholars. The amount raised for missions, $6,642.

A remarkable thing, recently transpiring, is the action of the native Presbyterian Church in Japan in "recasting" the creed of that church with some omissions and some additions. The Baptist Missionary Magazine for the month specifies one of these changes as the casting out of the article touching "infant baptism," that rite not being regarded as Scriptural.

Make men see and feel that a saloon is a more positive evil to a neighborhood than a shanty filled with smallpox patients, and a fire will be kindled which will purge the country of its greatest crime and misery breeder whose colossal shadow envelops Christendom and carries a thrill of misery, a pulsation of vice, a throb of degradation wherever it falls. —[The Arena.

It is a sad fact that there is very little mutual confession done among Christians in these days. The only kind of confession that one hears much of is a kind of general depreciation and humiliation—a conventional assumption in toto of the sins of the human family. If one desired to pray for such a person, one would be totally at a loss where to begin or where to leave off.

Cardinal Lavigerie, well known for his efforts to suppress the slave trade, has written a letter to the Emperor Alexander III, in which he defends the oppressed Russian Jews and claims for them their natural rights of which they are being deprived. The cardinal, not as a prelate, but as a man, implores the czar, in the name of humanity and Christianity, to have mercy on his Jewish subjects.—[Jewish Messenger.

It should never be forgotten that our influence, unconsciously, and without any special intention, wielded over others, constitutes far the larger part of the influence that we exercise among men. This influence depends not upon what we do or say at particular times, or under peculiar circumstances, but upon what we habitually are in the natural, spontaneous, and oft repeated exhibitions of our real character. One's words go for very little as against this influence.—[New York Independent.

Toast made over the fire is never so good as when made before it, except in the case of bright wood coals. Corncob coals are excelent. Housekeepers who find themselves in a neighborhood where wood is cheap should remember there is nothing more delicious than steak, fish, birds, or chickens broiled over bright wood coals.

W. R. Lee was driving an express wagon in Springfield, Ohio, four years ago, when a local church raised $1,000 to educate him as a medical missionary. He graduated a year ago and was sent by a missionary board to Siam, whose monarch has assigned Dr. Lee to an important medical post.

Mr. Oglesby, in one of his letters, said: "The only woman on record who was the wife of a Governor, the sister of a Governor, the niece of a Governor, and the aunt and foster mother of a Governor was a Southern woman." In his pamphlet he gives the name of this woman as Mrs. Richard Manning, of South Carolina.

Miss Jessie Sudlow, a 17 year old South Carolina girl, has won the prize that was offered by the Times of Manchester, England, for the best composition on "The Best Book and Why I Like It." The competition was open to the world, and there were competitors from France, Germany, Canada, South America, Mexico, and the United States. Her subject was "Ivanhoe."

Senator George has the true look of a Mississippi roustabout in his clothes. There is nothing of the dude about the big, hearty, and careless man, whose garments fit him as if he had been measured with a two foot rule and the tailor had shaped them out with a crosscut saw. He is just the sort of farmer like old fellow whom you would expect to meet in a cross road grocery, dickering about the price of molasses or the weight of a prize hog.

Oscar H. Ogden and E. B. Parker are two young men who went West to grow up with the country and hit the combination about right. They went to the Elkhorn district in Montana a year ago and located six claims. As work progressed on the claims the property put on such a rosy hue as a gold mine that they have disposed of it for $100,000.

THE EVANGELICAL CHURCH.

THE GREAT LEGAL CONTROVERSY BETWEEN ESHER AND ANTI-ESHER PARTIES.

The great legal contest between the Eshers and anti-Esher parties of the Evangelical Association, is at this time creating intense interest among the members and friends of that denomination. The opposing factions are crossing swords in Judge Hamilton's court in Cleveland, O. The prosecutors claim that the Esher faction has unjustly withheld dividends arising from the profits of the publishing house in Cleveland, O., from conferences entitled to them according to discipline and given them to present to conferences which have no legal existence; that the official church papers were used as a medium for spiteful and unchristian attacks on persons and the conferences without allowing the common right of vindication, and that partisan pamphlets were issued at the expense of the association in which are found bitter denunciations of persons who do not sanction the high-handed course of the suspended Bishops Esher and Bowman. The prayer of the petitioners is that the Board of publication, the Missionary Society and the publishing agents be restrained from such a partisan and unjust appropriation of funds and that equal rights be given to all.

As might be expected, many points are contested and much matetial testimony thus far presented by the complainants has been strenuously objected to by the defendants, among whose counsel is E. B. Esher, the son of Bishop Esher and the son-in-law of Bishop Bowman, both of whom have been suspended from offices by regular church courts, which suspension, however, they both ignore.

The decisions of Judge Hamilton in reference to the objections by the defendants have thus far, according to the Cleveland papers, been quite favorable to the complainants. A very important point in this direction is the admission as evidence of the proceedings of the trial conference which suspended Bishop Esher, in Reading, Pa., over one year ago. The trial is likely to continue at least three weeks.

NINE PERSONS INJURED.

PASSENGER AND GRAVEL COLLIDE AT A STATION.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., June 23.—A passenger and a gravel train collided here at 9 o'clock this morning, just in front of the station. The headlight and front ends of the locomotives, the front end of the baggage car of the passenger train, and a number of the gravel cars were smashed. The shock of the collision hurled passengers and trainmen from their position. Engineer Frank Fowler and Fireman J. Sweeney, of the passenger train, were seriously hurt about the head. Engineer Fred Strong and Fireman G. Elliott, of the gravel train, are suffering from the shock.

The following passengers were seriously hurt, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Havil, of New Haven, suffering from shock and cuts; Mrs. Brown, head cut; Henry Odell, aged 11, of Scarsdale, four wounds about his head and body, and suffering from shock; Mr. Meyers, back hurt. The other passengers escaped with a bad shaking up, scratches and slight wounds. The wreck was cleared away in about an hour. The engineer of both trains say they were signalled that everything was all right, and lay the blame upon the flagman, Arthur Stephens.

A Little Girl's Experience in a Lighthouse

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of the Gov. Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones".—Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at C. M. Parrish's Drug Store.

OVERWHELMING "SEBASTOPOL."

JUST WHAT HARRISBURG'S STUPENDOUS SPECTACLE IS LIKE.

One of the most gorgeous pyrotechnic spectacles of the age was witnessed by more than 8 000 people at Island Park on its first presentation. The "Last Days of Pompeii" was great, but "Sebastopol" is greater. The first thing that meets the gaze is the colossal and realistic painting containing 10,000 square yards of canvas. The most conspicuous is the fort, Malakoff. The Black Sea lies between the audience and the city. On the plateau between the two are the Russians. The fort was very warlike; its big guns were formidable-looking objects. The steamships are seen floating on the crests of the waves. The great buildings are doubly prominent. The chain of mountains was realistic.

After a few military strains from the band a hundred sailors in white ran down to the lake and jumped into small boats. They reconnoitered until the Russian troops in camp were seen. The city was then in their possession. It is the night when the memorable siege terminates the long and bloody encounter known as the Crimean war, which began October, 1854, and ended September, 1855. In the scene numerous men-of-war are quietly resting at anchor, apparently unconscious of the terrible events soon to take place, but which, at the proper time, send their fiery missiles full and fair at the Malakoff, dealing death and destruction to the once proud and lofty fortress of the Russian troops.

The performances will be given on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings until July 8, when the affair comes to a close.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.:

Sirs:—Last Summer I cured a Curb upon my horse with your celebrated Kendall's Spavin Cure and it was the best job I ever saw done. I have a dozen empty bottles, having used it with perfect success, curing every thing I tried it on. My neighbor had a horse with a very bad Spavin that made him lame. He asked me how to cure it. I recommended Kendall's Spavin Cure. He cured the Spavin in just three weeks.

Yours respectfully, WOLCOTT WITTER.

The Philadelphia Press

has won the foremost place among Pennsylvania newspapers by the liberality, enterprise and fairness with which it conducts its business, reports great events, and the completeness with which it records, day by day, the life of the city, State and country.

Its field is world-wide, and its staff, its special correspondents, so many and well organized, its sources of news so numerous, that it appeals to a wider constituency than any other newspaper ever published in the State of Pennsylvania.

"THE PRESS," said one of the managers of the Western Union Telegraph Co., "now receives more telegraphic news than all the other Philadelphia papers combined." This statement is authorative and conclusive, and The Press presents, as daily witnesses to its truth, its twelve to twenty-four bright and interesting pages.

But it is not only by its news enterprise—by the zeal, energy and integrity of its reporters and correspondents that The Press won and held the confidence of its many thousands of readers, representing every age and every condition of life, every trade and every profession, every faith and every political opinion. It is the excellence and varied interest of The Press as a general family journal, appealing to women as well as to men, which have made for it so many friends at home, and extended its reputation all over the country. It prints every important event of the world's progress.

The printing of news is always its first business, but its columns are also enriched by contributions from the most gifted special writers, the most famous novelists, and some of the most eminent public men of the time. The literary engagements already made for 1891 probably surpass in number and variety, and nearly equal in cost, any contemporary magazine, for the field and resources of such a newspaper as The Press make it not only a daily historian, but a daily forum and a daily tribuner.

Its steadily growing profits and its steadfast constituency not only demand, but insure progress. The greatest authors, as well as the brightest news correspondents, find their largest profits derived from any Pennsylvania newspaper, as well as their best Pennsylvania audience, in Daily, Sunday and Weekly Press.

In politics The Press is Republican, but it knows no other master than the people whose rights, aspirations and needs it always defends. It has no enemies to punish, no individual political ambitions to foster or promote, and is subservient to no politician or clique. Faithful to the great body of readers and voters whom it truly represents, it promotes its own interest and influence by upholding theirs. Its editorial opinions are fearless and frank—never captious. Its news is always impartial. In its pages the workingmen find as ready audience as the capitalist. Total commercial and industrial progress, to the best thought and best action in every sphere of human enterprise, it accords a generous and enlightened hospitality. In the columns of The Philadelphia Press justice finds "all seasons summer."

AN ESCAPE FROM PIRATES.

If a feeling of superstition with regard to unlucky vessels were ever pardonable, it must surely have been so in the case of the brig Crawford, owned first at Freetown, Mass., and afterward for many years at Warren, R. I.

It would seem as if no nervous person, acquainted with her history, could have trod her decks in the still midnight watches upon the ocean without a creeping sensation of dread.

The writer has a distinct recollection of this little full rigged brig as a vessel which figured prominently among the notable craft of his boyhood. There were dark stains on her deck which had the appearance of iron rust, but which all knew were not iron rust. She had been the scene of a tragedy that, with its associations, was one of the most remarkable upon record.

Her whaling voyages from Warren, of which she made a number, were all unfortunate in a pecuniary sense. From one of them, after an absence of 14 months, she returned without having taken a drop of oil—her captain having actually been obliged to purchase a supply for the binnacle lamp at some foreign port.

But the one dreadful event of her history had occurred while she belonged to Freetown. In fact, it was chiefly in consequence of this that she was sold to her purchasers in Warren, her original owners feeling that they could no longer bear to look upon her.

It was, I think, about 1829 that the Crawford sailed f r the West Indies under the command of a Captain Brightman, whose crew consisted of his two mates, a cook, and three foremast hands.

Her outward cargo was disposed of at Havana, and she was nearly ready for the homeward voyage when four Spaniards came on board, seeking for a passage to the United States. They were villainous looking fellows, with swarthy faces and flashing black eyes.

The mate advised Captain Brightman not to accept them, and urged his objections with some force. The captain himself hesitated at first, but the thought of the passage money was too tempting, and he finally consented to take the strangers on board.

One of the four passengers could speak English, but his companions knew only Spanish. After the brig had been at sea a few days, the cook detected this man, whose name was Tardy, in the act of sprinkling some white substance on a quantity of food in the galley. Tardy explained that the article was a kind of seasoning well known in Cuba, and that he wished the officers and crew to try its flavor.

The cook scraped off as much of it as he could; but, although the fact of his doing so shows that he must have had a suspicion of foul play, he unfortunately did not make known the incident until too late. He may have thought that his knife had removed all danger.

Immediately after eating, the captain and chief mate were taken violently ill. The foremast hands also felt some bad effects from their meal, though in a less degree; but the second mate escaped, as his duties on deck had kept him from eating with the captain. As to the four passengers, they, of course, had taken care not to touch the food on which the white powder had been sprinkled.

It was now that the terrified cook told the mate what had occurred in the galley. But in a few moments his voice was silenced forever. He was struck down by the murderous pirates, who seeing that their work was but half accomplished by the poison, at once proceeded to complete it with their knives.

The captain and chief mate they killed in the cabin; the cook and one of the foremast hands were murdered close by the windlass, on the forward part of the deck; while another sailor was killed as he stood at the wheel.

Meanwhile, the second mate, whose name was Durfee, and a man named Allen Bicknell, of Barrington, R. I., who were now the only survivors, ran aloft in the forlorn hope of thus saving their lives. The pirates fired at Bicknell with pistols, wounding him as he stood in the foretop.

Tardy now hailed the second mate, promising to spare his life if he would come down, as they required him to navigate the vessel. He accordingly descended, and was not harmed. Seeing the officer in present safety, Bicknell, the poor sailor, already wounded, asked if they would spare him also. Upon receiving a reply in the affirmative, he came painfully down the rigging; but the moment he reached the deck he was killed.

The vessel was now entirely in the possession of these monsters, and the feelings of Durfee must have been indescribable, as he realized the extent of the tragedy and his own dreadful situation.

He knew, of course, that the pirates would never, if they could help it, permit him to leave the vessel alive. It might serve their purpose to spare him for a time, but unless he should be able to hit upon some manner of deliverance the fate of his shipmates must at last be his.

The bodies of the victims were thrown into the sea, and the four murderous scoundrels then commenced searching the cabin, being apparently aware that she had on board a considerable amount of money. This they brought on deck and divided, all the while talking rapidly in Spanish.

Tardy now informed the second mate that the brig must be taken to South America. Durfee well knew that should he carry the wretches to that part of the world his own doom would be sealed the moment they reached its shores. He sought for some excuse to land elsewhere, and fortunately found one.

"I can take you to South America," he said, "but for such a voyage we must have more water. We have only enough to last for a short time, and we may be 60 or 70 days on the passage."

Tardy uttered a Spanish oath or two, and then asked if a supply could not be obtained by entering some inlet of the coast where there would be no danger of capture.

"Yes," replied Durfee, glad that the pirate had anticipated a proposition which he himself had intended to make. "We could run in at night and get out before morning. Then we should be all ready for a voyage to South America or anywhere else."

Tardy flourished his knife fiercely before the face of his helpless prisoner, thus indicating what would be done in case of the least attempt at deception. Durfee's nerves had already suffered terribly, and it was only by the greatest effort that he could maintain anything like an appearance of calmness.

Hastily running over in his thoughts the various inlets of the coast, he resolved upon making for Chesapeake Bay. He was far, however, from telling the pirates of his decision, but led them to suppose that the destination was some obscure nook among islands and promontories. It was fortunate for him that they knew nothing whatever of the existence of the wide water sheet which he had in mind.

He used to relate that while the vessel was running on the course he had chosen, and he was filled with the most dreadful anxiety lest his plans should, after all, miscarry, Tardy would come to him, and with oaths boast of the murders he had committed.

Great was Durfee's anxiety as the brig made the land! Soon his fate would be decided. He thought with a sickening sensation of the pirate's threats, but he thought, too, of the fort at Old Point Comfort, and upon this his hope rested. It must, of course, be approached at night, and luckily the Spaniards were as anxious for the cover of darkness as was he himself, so that he was permitted to keep off shore until past sunset.

Then the little brig stood in under all sail. With a fine breeze she passed Cape Henry, and continued her course up the bay. It was for Durfee an hour of unspeakable suspense. At any moment the pirates might take alarm, and he felt almost a surprise to find that they did not do so. Here and there could be seen distant lights, but the shores were hidden in darkness, and the evil eyed wretches, wary as they were, seemed not to suspect treachery.

Being for the time in command, as navigator and pilot, the anxious officer was at the wheel, while his unwelcome companions stood ready to shorten sail and let go the anchor at his bidding. It may well be imagined that he measured with every nerve alert each inch of the way.

The brig's yawl hung at the stern davits. He had made sure that its tackles were in running order. How near to the fort would he dare to approach before bringing the brig to?

Presently he directed his dangerous crew to take in the light sails and the courses. Tardy repeated the order in Spanish, and it was obeyed.

"Let go the topsail halyards," was the next command; and down came the topsail yards upon the caps.

Clearing his throat for another effort, Durfee felt that his heart throbs were almost suffocating. Nevertheless, he was able to command his voice.

"Stand by to let go anchor!" he cried, feeling that in another moment he would know his fate. The four pirates ran to the windlass.

"Let go!"

There was a splash under the bow, and a swift paying out of the cable. Just then Durfee sprang over the taffrail and into the boat, lowering it instantly, and with a violent push sent it spinning from under the brig's counter. Then, seizing an oar, he commenced sculling with all his might. As he did so he heard the Spaniards rushing aft, but they were too late to get more than a glimpse of him in the darkness.

The grim fortress at Old Point Comfort was not a quarter of a mile distant. Durfee's calls drew the attention of the sentries, and in a few minutes there were lights gleaming from a row of portholes, with the black muzzles of cannon looking threateningly forth into the darkness, and a dozen soldiers were at once ordered to board the vessel. On reaching her, they found only three of the pirates on deck. These were at once made prisoners. Hurrying into the cabin, they found Tardy lying dead upon the floor. Struck with despair at the impossibility of escape, he had chosen to die by his own hand rather than to await the inevitable halter.

His three accomplices were tried and hanged at Norfolk. They died protesting their innocence, and declaring that the entire guilt rested upon their dead confederate.

As to poor Durfee, the second mate, after the dreadful scenes he had passed through, he was never really himself. His nervous system had been thoroughly shattered.

Who can wonder that painful thoughts were always associated with the Crawford, or that a gloom should seem to invest even the old Warren wharf where she used to lie!—[George H. Coomer.

The Workshops of Nazareth.

The shops of Nazareth are primitive. Unfortunately, the carpenters have introduced the modern novelty of a work bench, and no longer sit on the floor beside the board at which they work, as some related crafts still do elsewhere. But their tools are very simple, and it is interesting to notice them doing a great deal at the door sill, in the light, which with us can only be done at the bench. They sit on the ground to drill holes in wood or to use the adze; but at best their work seems very rude. Blacksmiths, with tiny bellows and furnace and small anvil, find abundant employment in sharpening the simple ploughs and mattocks of the peasantry, and making folding knives for them, the quality of which may be judged from their price, which is only twopence or threepence. Shoemakers also do a good trade, sitting, like all other workmen who can do so, at the door or in the street, but their skill is confined to slight, short boots of bright colored leather, or to slippers without heels, which are all that one sees, as a rule, even on the roughest roads.

Foot passage over the Brooklyn Bridge is now free.

THE BRONCO.

The Good and Bad Things That Can Be Said of Him.

There is no horse superior to the bronco for endurance; few are his equals. He came by it naturally from the Spanish stock of Moorish descent, the individuals of which race, abandoned in the sixteenth century, were his immediate ancestors; and his hardy life has, by survival of the fittest, increased this endurance tenfold. He is not handsome. His middle piece is distended by grass food; it is loosely joined to his quarters, and his hip is very short.

He has a hammer head and the pronounced ewe neck which all plains or steppes horses seem to acquire. His legs are naturally perfect, but they finally give way at the knees from short stopping with a gag bit, for an Indian will turn on a 10 cent piece. One form of racing is to place two long parallel strips of buffalo hide on the ground at an interval of but a few feet, and starting from a distance, to ride up to these strips, cross the first, turn between the two and gallop back to the starting point.

Another is to ride up to a log hung horizontally and just high enough to allow the pony to get under, but not the rider, touch it, and return. If the pony is stopped too soon the Indian loses time in touching the log; if too late, he gets scraped off. The sudden jerking of the pony on his haunches is apt both to start curbs and break his knees.

The toughness and strength of the pony can scarcely be exaggerated. He will live through a winter that will kill the hardiest cattle. He worries through the long months when the snow has covered up the bunch grass on a diet of cottonwood boughs which the Indian cuts down for him, and in the spring it takes but a few weeks for him to scour out into splendid condition.

He can go unheard of distances. Colouel R. I. Dodge records an instance coming under his observation where a pony carried the mails 300 miles in three consecutive nights, and back over the same road the next week, and kept this up for six months without loss of condition. He can carry any weight. Mr. Parkman speaks of a chief, known as Le Cochon, on account of his 300 pounds avoirdupois, who nevertheless rode his ponies as bravely as a man of half the bulk.

He as often carries two people as one. There is simply no end to this wonderful product of the prairies. He works many years. So long as he will fat up in the spring his age is immaterial.

The absence of crest in the pony suggests the curious query of what has become of the proud arching neck of his ancestor, the Barb. There are two ways of accounting for this. The Indian's gag bit, invariably applied with a jerk, throws up the pony's head instead of bringing it down as the slow and light application of the school curb will do, and this tends to develop the ewe neck.

Or a more sufficient reason may be found in the fact that the starvation which the pony annually undergoes in the winter months tends to deplete him of every superflous ounce of flesh. The crest in the horse is mostly meat, and its annual depletion has finally brought down the pony's neck nearer to the outline of the skeleton.—[Harper's Magazine.

GENERAL GREENE'S STRATEGY.

Victory and Defeat Alike Contributed to the Purpose of His Campaign.

In his article, "From King's Mountain to Yorktown," in the Atlantic Monthly, speaking of General Greene's last campaign, John Fiske writes:

"Coming upon the scene under almost every imaginable disadvantage, he had reorganized the remnant of Gates's broken and dispirited army, he had taken the initiative from the first, and he had held the game in his own hands till the last blow was struck. So consummate had been his strategy that, whether victorious or defeated on the field, he had, in every instance, gained the object for which the campaign was made. Under one disadvantage, indeed, he had not labored; he had excellent officers.

"Seldom has a more brilliant group been seen than that which comprised Morgan, Campbell, Marion, Sumter, Pickens, Otho Williams, William Washington, and the father of Robert Edward Lee. It is only an able general, however, who knows how to use such admirable instruments. Men of narrow intelligence do not like to have able men about them and do not know how to deal with them. Gates had De Kalb and Otho Williams, and put them in places where their talent was unavailable, and one of them was uselessly sacrified, while he was too dull to detect the extraordinary value of Marion.

"But genius is quick to see genius and knows what to do with it. Greene knew what each one of his officers would do, and took it into the account in planning his sweeping movements. Unless he had known that he could depend upon Morgan as certainly as Napoleon, in after years, relied upon Davoust on the day of Jena and Auerstadt, it would have been foolhardy for him to divide his force in the beginning of the campaign—a move which, though made in apparent violation of military rules, nevertheless gave him the initiative in his long and triumphant game. What Greene might have accomplished on a wider field and with more ample resources can never be known. But the intellectual qualities which he showed in his Southern campaign were those which have characterized some of the foremost strategists of modern times."

Mules in the Coal Mines.

The average life of a mule at work underground in an anthracite coal mine is about five years. One of the large anthracite coal mining companies has kept careful records of about 600 mules employed in its mines during a period of seven years, and has found that it is necessary to replace about 21 per cent of the mules each year, owing to deaths from accident and sickness, colic causing the greatest number of deaths. The largest number of accidents was the crushing of mules between cars or between a car and a prop or side of a gangway.

FUNNY WAYS OF STARFISH.

Five Individuals in One, Who Live Together Amiably as a Rule.

"The attack of a starfish upon an oyster may be likened to an assault by organized conspirators, inasmuch as each of these five fingered animals is composed of five distinct individuals," said a scientist to a writer. And he added:

"Each of the starfish's five arms has its own mind, nervous system, and thoughts, such as they are, and all five nerve systems simply meet in the center where the arms are joined. Thus it may be said that the mental guidance of this complex creature and the management of its affairs are intrusted to a board of five members, who have communication with each other, but act without the intermediation of a presiding officer. Now, is it not wonderful that such a quintet should be able to manage its affairs so well and with such agreement of purpose in everything? Supposing each of the five individuals attempted to go where it listed without giving any heed to the others, the animal could not reach a choice bit of food, espied from afar with the eye of one of its members, nor travel in any direction with a purpose in view. But, as a matter of fact proved by observation, when a starfish is spying after food it lifts the ends of its five arms so that the eye beneath each extremity may get a view of things in the neighborhood, and if any object worth going after is discovered all the many hundreds of sucker like feet beneath the five arms are seen to push out together in the direction of the morsel desired. There is a unity of intention among the partners that implies unmistakably a conscious sharing of aim and design. The same thing is shown by the way many starfishes have of letting themselves drop from steep rocks and cliffs, in order to save the trouble of laborious climbing down. In such cases before they relinquish their hold and drop they let go with three or four arms, holding fast until the last moment with the remaining one or two, as if it were to calculate the leap.

"My observations on this subject have inclined me to think that matters of concerted action with starfish have not infrequently to be effected by first obtaining the assent of an individual ray that is willing. It is known that these creatures sometimes divide themselves voluntarily into a three armed and a two armed portion, which may be regarded as the violent dissolution of business and domestic relations once happy but grown inharmonious. A starfish will often cast off one of its arms and leave it behind, perhaps because the member is not found agreeable to live with. If a rubber band or a string is fastened around an arm of one of these animals and it can not push the annoyance off with its other arms the starfish will throw the troublesome arm away, not desiring to retain the companionship of such a cripple. Starfish are like human beings in many ways. Then the animal which has thus deprived itself of a ray grows a new one in place of the old.

"As for the arm that is dropped, it promptly proceeds to grow four new arms, thus becoming a whole starfish itself. Being the biggest, it is presumably for a long time the boss of the five, which must be gratifying. A few years ago people who caught starfish in the oyster beds destroyed them, as they thought, by cutting them in halves and throwing them overboard, but the process was not very effective, inasmuch as every one thus treated promptly became two."

Snow Statues.

Boys and girls who make "snow men" may not be aware that they are artists, but in a humble way they are, and many stories have been told of sculptors who have obtained the inspiration of their career from the making of figures in snow. Thorwaldsen, the great Danish sculptor, was one of these. He was instinctively an artist in snow before he became an artist in clay and marble. Furthermore, trained sculptors have condescended to make statues in snow.

Pietro de Medicis, a great patron of art in Italy, employed Michael Angelo, during a particularly severe winter in northern Italy, to make snow statues, and the sculptor executed these singular commissions with fidelity.

Under the reign of Louis XIII of France, a splendid statue in snow was erected at the crossing of several streets in Paris with verses in neat raised letters upon it which may be translated thus:

> "Remember, you who pass, the day
> When you, like me, must melt away;
> And pray that winter rule the sky,
> For when it thaws, alas! I die."

During the severe winter of 1784, King Louis XVI of France ordered his finance minister to use the public moneys to alleviate the condition of the poor of Paris; and in return the Parisians raised to the king a fine statue of snow in one of the most public places of the city. The pedestal bore some very ordinary and perfunctory verses, somewhat like the following:

> "Great Louis, the poor, whom thy bounties protect,
> To thee but a statue of snow may erect;
> But to thy generous heart it is pleasanter, sure,
> That the marble should pay for the bread of the poor."

Six years afterward another very cold winter came, and the people then cared very little for the benefactions of King Louis. Snow statues were again the order of the day, and one of them, a representation of the Goddess of Liberty, was said to have borne this somewhat ironical but prophetic inscription:

"This is Liberty! Worship her, for tomorrow she will be gone."

Very Embarrassing.

Several ladies were sitting together on the balcony of a Southport hotel the other night when the moon, although full, was somewhat hidden by clouds. A natty little fellow came toward the group and said softly: "Pussy, darling," whereupon all the young ladies jumped up and came toward him eagerly. He selected one and walked away with her. The other brides sat down and told their respective Romeos afterward that it was "too ridiculous for anything," and that they "never were so embarrassed in the whole course of their lives."—[Sheffield Telegraph.

A YEAR OF STORMS.

THE DISCOURAGING PREDICTIONS OF A SEER AND HIS REASONS.

Professor Foster in the Washington Star.

Beginning with the first week in May of this year and ending with the last week in June, 1892, will coustitute the greatest storm period since 1832 3, and it will be at its greatest force during the coming winter. The winter will set in early and with its unusual cold and great snow storms and blizzards will be what is termed a very hard winter.

These winter storms will begin in the northern tier of states with great severity in October, and an early winter, very severe all over the continent, will follow. The force of the storms will increase very gradually, and the May storms will not be so marked as those later on. We will probably have an occasional tornado, but destructive storms will not attract general attention until June 8, when the great battle of the elements will begin in earnest, and every month will bring its noted storms.

June is not always a month of great storms, but it will be this year, and should my predictions be verified as to that month the public will give more attention to what I have said as to the eleven months that follow it October and November are months that usually bring the tropical hurricanes that are sometimes very disastrous on the Gulf of Mexico and occasionally do much damage as far north as Tennessee and Arkansas.

The great hurricane that visited the lower Mississippi and the coast of the Gulf of Mexico in 1832-3 will be repeated next October and November. Whenever you find an old man who followed flat boating on the Ohio and Mississippi river in 1832-3 you will find an oracle who who can reveal much history about the hurricanes of the lower Mississippi river at that time. Portions of Florida were greatly damaged by the hurricanes sixty years ago.

I do not desire to create any unnecessary sensation about this very great storm period, but no harm can come by being prepared for the very severe winter and the great storms Hundreds and thousands of people who read my weather forecasts every week will have great faith in the predictions made in this letter, for they know that I am very careful and seldom mislead them. The forecasts are not based on any superstition or secret, but on what I know to be, and on what any peason may know to be, real physical causes.

The causes fo this period of great disturbance will be the equinox of Jupiter next January. Jupiter's equinox occurred in August and Saturn's in October, 1823, and hence the great storms of that year and the year following. The equinoxes of these planets cause great electric disturbances in our solar system just as do the equinoxes of our earth in March and September but on a larger scale.

Electricity is the force that causes all storms, and the sun and all the planets throw an electric force into space over their equators, as does the electro dynamo, and consequently when any planet passes its equinoctical and electric tention of the sun and of that planet are disturbed and simultaneously the electric force of every planet in the solar system is unbalanced, which affects the electric currents of the earth.

Obituary.

Laura Bell (Heaton) Sayers was born March 8th, 1862, and died June 24th, 1891, aged 29 years, 3 months and 16 days. She made a profession of the religion of Christ over twelve years ago and was baptized into the fellowship of the Milesburg Baptist Church by Rev Biggert. She lived a devoted christian life by which she endeared herself to all who became acquainted with her, by her sweet christian spirit and graces. She died in the triumphs of a living faith. Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. T. B. Cross, who spoke from 1 Cor. 15: 26 "The last enemy, death, shall be destroyed. A large concourse of friends and relations followed the remains to their last resting place to await reseruction of the just. She leaves a husband and a little infant child whowill never know a mothers love and tender care. With a father and mother with brothers and a sister together with a host of friends to mourn their loss.

What to Teach Girls.

Give your girls a thorough education. Teach them to cook and prepare the food of the household.

Teach them to wash, to iron, to darn stockings, to sew on buttons and to make their own dresses:

Teach them to spend within their income.

Teach them to wear a calico dress that is paid for with more comfort than a silk one which is still owing.

Teach them how to purchase, and see that the account tallies with the purchase.

Teach them that good health and a bright face is better than any cosmetic.

Teach them good common sense self help and industry.

Teach them that marrying a man without principle is like putting to sea without compass or rudder.

Teach them if you can afford it, music, paintings and other accomplishments, but insist on a certain amount of good reading daily.

Merit Measured By Success.

The wonderful popularity of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) is the natural result of the tests to which the public has put it. The merits of the medicine have remained the same but the knowledge of the people with respect to its remarkable curative properties has increased until now there is a demand for it wherever the English language is spoken. S. S. S. was first offered as a specific for contagious blood poison. For that it was, and is, truly a specific. But it is now regarded, wherever its virtues are known, as a true specific for all forms of blood disease. Whose columns could be filled with testimony to this effect.

4 Mothers, 10 Children

These children are being brought up on Castoria. Read what the mothers say about Castoria. There is no opium, morphine or other narcotic substance in Castoria. The formula is printed on the wrapper of every bottle. It is perfectly harmless, pleasant to take and positively effective. Physicians prescribe Castoria, mothers give Castoria, and children cry for Castoria. It gives the child health and the mother rest.

"I certify that Pearle Robbie Hale, of 466 Portland Avenue, St. Paul, was a thin, crying baby from his birth until he was given Castoria. He began to improve from the first week's trial. Has taken 13 bottles; is perfectly well; weighed 30 pounds the day he was 7 months old, and when this picture was taken. Robbie's changed condition has caused many mothers to use Castoria. It is the best thing for babies I have ever known."

FANNIE MULLEN, Professional Nurse.
466 Portland Ave.,
St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 4, 1887.

"This is a picture of my twins, Charlie and William. It was taken when they were 5½ months old. They weigh 16 pounds each. I am indebted to Castoria for their uniform good health.

MRS. HERMINE SCHULZE.
1623 Lexington Ave.,
New York, May 18th, 1887.

"I enclose you photograph of my 'triplets,' 2 boys and 1 girl—Maggie, Pettie and Willie. I owe their health and strength to Castoria. It was through my neighbors' urgent appeals that I commenced its use, as both my boys were thin and inclined to be sickly. At present they are fat and hearty, they weigh 8, 9½ and 9½ pounds, and are 2 months and 3 days old."

MRS. MARY KLINGER.
726 Cortland Ave.,
New York, May 22d, 1887.

"I enclose you photograph of my quartette, 4 girls. They are now 2 weeks old. The smallest weighs 5 pounds, the others 8 pounds each. My other children have all gained health and strength from the use of Castoria, and I have already commenced giving it to my little darlings."

MRS. ANNA DEGROOTE.
Millbury, Mass., Nov. 15, 1888.

—The art publishing house of R. K. Bonine almost went up in smoke this morning. An oil stove became overheated and burst into a blaze. When Mr. Bonine attempted to throw it from the building, the fire communicated to the curtains and floor, and it was only by quick action that a general blaze was averted. The loss, principally in silver destroyed, amounts to about $20. No fire alarm was sounded.

—A good story comes to us about a small boy: He was kneeling down saying his prayers, and his little feet stuck out behind his night gown. His little sister Nellie came in, and the temptation was too great for her, so she came up behind him and began to tickle the soles of his feet. He stood it as long as he could, but at last he said, "Oh Lord, please excuse me while I knock the stuffin' out of Nellie."

A FATAL EXPLOSION.

MRS WILLIAM MILLS MEETS HER DEATH UNDER SAD CIRCUMSTANCES.

Mrs Mills, the young wife of William Mills, living at Nuttall's block, near Ashcroft, met her death last night in the most distressing manner. About five o'clock she began to make preparations for supper. She supposing the fire in the stove had entirely died out, picked up the coal oil can, containing nearly a gallon of oil, and attempted to pour a little on some of the wood in the stove, which had not burned. Unfortunately, there was still a little fire in the stove, and as a result, the flames shot up and ignited the oil in the can, causing a terrible explosion. In an instant she was enveloped in flames, and notwithstanding the efforts of her husband and others who happened to be about the premises at the time, they could not be extinguished and every bit of clothing on her body was consumed. She was burned almost to a crisp, and suffered the bitterest agony up until eleven o'clock, when her death came to her relief. She retained her consciousness up until the last, and just before she died bade her friends a most affectionate farewell. Her fourmonths-old child, who was sitting in a high chair in an adjoining room was also badly burned, the little one's appeared having caught fire from the mother's burning clothing as the latter in her excitement rushed into the room with the view of saving the life of her child. It is very much ferred thas the little one can not survive.

Mrs. Mills was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, who live near by a young woman of excellent Christain character and held in high esteem by all who knew her. She leaves a husban and three small children, Advantages of Paved Streets.

Huntingdon has the reputation of having the best side walks of any town of its size in the state, and judging from the enterprise displayed by a large number of our citizens in getting cement pavements, the purpose seems to be maintained. Why cannot the some commendable spirit be manifested in improving the streets? Good pavements are an excellent thing, but well paved streets are better. An exchange well says; There are few greater benefits to a city than well paved streets. They are pleasant to look upon and while that in itself is the special benefit, yet it removes a source of continual aggravation and dissatisfaction. They expedite and render more easy and satisfactory the hauling of heavy loads and the transmission of merchants' supplies generally. They lessen the amount of mud in the winter and spring, and the decrease of the dust clouds which swirl through the streets with every passing breeze. They are a benefit to merchants and housekeepers alike as that they keep down the volume of dust which finds its way into shops and stores, injuring merchandise of all kinds and adding much to the anguish of the cleanly housewife. Heavier loads can be drawn over them with greater ease to the horses and less ware and tear to the wagons. They require fewer repairs than common roads and are therefore more economical in the end than ordinary mud roads. Inasmuch as they lessen the dust which is all the while in the air, they are also healthier than common roads. They are attractive to strangers, and are far more likely to invite new industrial enterprise which would not otherwise be drawn where they are. We are all anxious to have our dwellings well floored and well kept-why shall we not do the same by our streets? Attractiveness, utility and cheapness are combined in a well paved street. They are not a waste but a saving.

Sudden Death.

The friends and relatives were very much shocked yesterday to learn of the death of Mrs. Charles Woods, wife of the Rev. Woods of Germantown, better known in this place before her marriage as Miss Holly Morris. She was a niece of Mrs. E. Blanchard on Linn Street and had frequently visited here. Mrs. Woods, had but a week or so since buried her father. She in company with Miss Mary Blanchard of Bellefonte had just gone down to the Wood's summer cottage at the sea shore, where Mrs. Woods was taken suddenly ill and passed out of this world before any of the relatives could be summoned. Mr. and Mrs. Evan Blanchard and family departed for Germantown on the 2 o'clock train yesterday. Mrs. Woods was reported to have been extremely wealthy, having been left an extra fortune by her father's death.

It seems an extremely sorrowful thing that one so young, lovely in in person, sweet in character, should have been so suddenly snatched away from an idolizing husband, mother, and other loving relatives and friends.

Found Dead in Bed.

Mrs. Michael Hayden was found dead in bed this morning at her home out at Collins' furnace. Her next door neighbor, Mrs. Hickey, tried to gain entrance to the room several times but always failing became alarmed and told her husband. The door was broken open and the two were horrified to find Mrs. Hayden dead in bed. How long she had lain there could not be told. There is yet no evidence of the cause of her death, but it is likely an examination will be made this afternoon to ascertain whether her death was the result of natural causes, whether from foul means or a suicide.

Mr. Hayden has been in the employ of the Collins' for the past two years and is now working for them up in York state. Word has been telegraphed to him. Mr. and Mrs. Hayden have been married only a couple of years. They have one child about a year old. The case is a sad one and the friends are deserving of sincere sympathy.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Would Have Died.

HOLYOKE, Mass., November, 1890.

I was in pain all over, could get no rest either night or day and was not able to do any work for months, but after taking Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic only one week, I was able to sit up and attend to my dressmaking. I had paid over two hundred dollars to doctors and got no benefit. I certainly think I should have died long ago if I had not got this medicine.

Effects of Coffee.

Coffee owes its stimulating and refreshing qualities to coffeine. It also contains gum and sugar, fat, acids wood and fibre: Like tea, it powerfully increases the respiration, but, unlike it, does not affect its depth.

By its use the rate of the pulse is increased and the action of skin diminished. It lessens the amount of blood sent to the organs of the body, distends the veins and contracts the capillaries, thus preventing the waste of tissue. It is a mental stimulus of high order, and one that is able to great abuse.

Carried to excess, it produces abnormal wakefulness, indigestion, acidity, heartburn, irritability of temper, trembling, irregular pulse, a kind of intoxication ending in delirium, a great injury to the spinal functions.

Unfortunately, there are many coffee tipplers who depend upon it as a drunkard upon his dram.

On the other hand, coffee is of sovereign efficacy in tiding over the nervous system in emergencies.

Coffee is also, in its place, an excellent medicine. In typhoid fever its action is frequently prompt and decisive. It is indicated in the early stages before local complications arise.

Coffee dispels stupor the lethargy, is an antidote for many kinds of poison, and is valuable in spasmodic asthma, whooping cough, cholera infantum and Asiatic cholera.

It is also excellent as a preventive against infections or epidemic diseases. In districts rife with malaria and fever the drinking of hot coffee before pasing into the open air has enabled persons living in such places to escape contagion.

ABOUT SPRING FEVER

Who hasn't suffered from this disease? We say disease advisedly, for such it is. It is a general relaxation of the system that makes the victim averse to exertion. Unless the constitution is keyed up when these symptoms appear, some acute malady attacks the most vulnerable point and life is endangered. A good stimulant promptly and properly used soon tones up the weak spots. Leading physicians of the land invariably recommend the use of Pure Rye Whiskey in such cases. Max Klein's "Silver Age" and "Duquesne" Rye Whiskies are sold under a sworn guarantee of purity so that the consumer takes no risk—"Silver Age" at $1.50 and "Duquesne" at $1.25 per full quart bottle. Mr. Klein also keeps the largest and choicest stock of Brandies, Wines, etc., in Pennsylvania. Goods are sent by express everywhere. Write for Catalogue and Price List (mentioning this paper) to Max Klein, 82 Federal street, Allegheny City.

Wind and Rain Storm.

MT. CARMEL, June 26.—A very heavy rain and wind storm struck this section this afternoon and caused a fatal accident two miles from this town. During the storm the Patterson colliery, a large structure operated by the Anthracite coal company was blown over and completely wrecked, entailing a loss of at least $25,800. Richard Roberts, William Lodge, J. B. Dodson and John M. Blossom, slaters, were working on the roof at the time and they were hurled to the ground and crushed to death by heavy timber. Two workman, whose names could not be learned shared the same fate as their companions.

Ocean to Ocean.

Over thirty-two years ago, Mr. Alfred Speer, of Passaic, imported from the banks of the Doura, in Portugal, a few of the Port Grape vines, and commenced careful experiment for the purpose of producing a fiass American Port, both fermented and unfermented. He has been eminently successful, and now Speer's wine and unfermented juice is known from ocean to ocean, and endorsed by the best medical talent in the world as the best now produced for the use of invalids. For sale by druggists.

Now Discovered Another Deficit

A GENEROUS ACT

How Editor Seely, of Jersey Shore Helped an Unfortunate Girl Victim of the Flood.

From the Harrisburg Telegraph.

There is Editor C. B. Seely, of Jersey Shore, he goes about doing good and not letting anybody know anything about. About a month before the Legislature adjourned Mr. Seely's good wife heard a story about a young girl residing near Jersey Shore, which she told her husband. It seems that the young girl, whose name is Ella M. Ramsey, was at her home with her mother when the great flood of 1889 swept through the valley. Their home was swept away and for refuge they climbed into a tree at night. During the night the tree was overturned by the force of the water, but not carried away. Miss Ramsey and her mother clung to the branches, and from 11 o'clock at night until 4 o'clock the next day the young girl was in water up to her neck. Both were rescued but the exposure was too much for the girl and she was taken ill. When she recovered she had lost her voice entirely. It was this story that Mr. Seely's wife told him, and he at once took measures for the unfortunate girl's relief. He visited Dr. Pepper at the University of Pennsylvania, in Philadelphia, and interested that benevolent gentleman to such an extent that he offered to give Miss Ramsey free treatment and care in the University Hospital Mr. Seely did not stop there. He saw the flood commission and secured the clever sum of $300 for Miss Ramsey which he gave to her, and about three weeks ago he and Mrs. Seely accompanied her to Philadelphia where she was placed in the hospital. Yesterday word was received in Jersey Shore that Miss Ramsey will be home next week. As Dr. Pepper said he would not let her go home until she could laugh and talk, it is fair to presume that she is cured, and it can be laid at the door of the Jersey Shore editor. An editor occasionally does a good thing, but somebody else has to find it out and te it.

Are Becoming Desperate.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—A telegram received here to-day from Paris states that the efforts of the Chilian insurgents to secure aid from the French government are becoming desperate. The insurgents, the telegram says, have promised to deliver to Peru immediately the territory of Taeria and the port of Africa provided the Peruvian government recognized them as belligerents, and gives them other assistants. The Peruvian government has peremptorily rejected the proposition of the insurgents.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our feitizens, that for years we have been selling Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. C M Parrish, druggist.

Pensions Paid Amount to $1,248,716,000

Dr. J. P. Glenn, of Altoona who a short time ago had the misfortune to break his leg, is getting on nicely.

Mr. Harry Brew, of Tyrone, spent Saturday at the Mt. House.

FIXLES.

WHAT BACCARAT IS.

A GAME LIKE VINGT ET UN, BUT WITH MORE COMBINATIONS.

Baccarat, fairly played in America, is the favorite fashionable gambling game of England and the continent. It is gambling pure and simple, may be played by any number of players and with any number of packs of cards. All bet against the dealer, who banks, and deals from a box similar to a cigar-box. The face cards each count ten, and the others according to the number of their spots. After the bets have been made the banker deals two cards to each of the players, including himself, but the other players must receive their cards before the banker is served.

The aim of the players is to make the numbers 9, 19, 29, or as nearly those as possible, as 8, 18 and 28. Any player is at liberty either to "stand," with the two cards first dealt, or called for more, at the risk of exceeding 29, when his stake is forfeited to the dealer. If, after the first distribution of two cards to each, any player has a "natural"—that is, a sum making 9, or next in value 19—he declares it, and the banker pays all who held superior hands to hi own, and claims from those holding inferior hands. The players stake their money separately, there being, in fact, as many separate games in progress as there are players, and the spectators may wager their money on any one of them, all of which must be accepted by the banker.

Prior to the banker making a start, he states the amount in the bank—for example £50- Any one sitting down at the table has the right to call the whole of the bank, selecting the left or the right on which to pick up the cards. If the bank is not called, then the banker proceeds to deal to £25 a side, or as much of it as may be "marked" or called—the former meaning that the money is placed on the table; the latter, that the banker has accepted the bet without the money being staked. The latter course, however, is quite the exception, the ready coin being invariably planked. Previous to the banker dealing the cards, it is the duty of two croupiers, one on the right and the other on the left, to count up the stakes deposited on either side, and then make up the bank. Thus the banker knows, to the smallest coin, the exact amount of his liabilities. Had the game been properly played at Tranby Croft,, no one would have stood an earthly chance of cheating.

At this season of the year when malaria lurks in the air, and bad colds not an unfrequent visitor, we long for a quick and effective remedy. There is scarcely a home without a sufferer from some of the many ills the flesh is heir to. A stimulant is after the intermediator. It is quick and effective. It brings relief and saves doctors bills. We can recommend Mr. Max Klein for anything in the liquor line. His silver age Rye at $1.50 per quart is the best whiskey in the market. He will sell a 5 y Pennsylvania Rye Whiskey six years old, at 1.00 for each quart or s x for $5.00. Congressional and Legislat ve Apportionments Vetoed.

HARRISBURG, June 23.—The bills dividing the State into Congressional and Legislative districts were vetoed this evening by the Governor. He gives his reosans in an extended form, his main objection to both bills being that they are unfair and contain many irregularities contrary to constitutional requirements. He is willing, he says, to postpone the reapportionment of the State to a Legislature which shall be elected by the people thoroughly awakened to a sense of how their representatives have failed to meet this duty.

—Decorate your homes for the fourth of July and thus make Bellefonte both gay and patriotic for the thousands of strangers who will be here on that day.

—It is said that Mr. F. W. Crider intends building two houses on the lot of ground on Lamb street just south of Mr. Howard Lingle's handsome residence.

—Gen. D. H. Hastings, delivered the annual address before the literary societies of Ursinus College on the subject "What shall we do with the College Graduate." on last evening- We imagine our Dan could tell them just what.

—Notice appears in the Altoona papers of the death of Mrs. Susanna, wife of Wm. E. Shope. She leaves a husband and seven children. Born in Centre county, she was 54 years of age and had been a resident of Altoona for nine years. The funeral occurred Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment at Oak Ridge Cemetery.

—Judge A. O. Furst took quite a large party, about fifty in all or a special car,to Snow Shoe Thursday to enjoy a days outing. The party will take dinner at the Mountain House and will return this evening by special train. Among the number are the persons from Harrisburg who came to Bellefonte on a coaching tour a few days ago.

—Mr. Frank Stenbgen has severed his connection with the Stopper & Fisk orchestra of Williamsport, owing to ill health and the irregular hour in which his position compelled him to play. Mr. Stenbgen is a fine musician and will be greatly missed. On Sept. 4th he will begin an engagement with Wm. R. Williamson, Mgr., of the grand opera house at Willmington.

—A little surprise took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs John Lane, the occasion being the birthday of Mr. Lane's mother. Quite unknown to her it had been quietly planned to have her youngest son Mr. Elliot Lane, of Lancaster, come on to spend the day with them. He came, and was ushered right into her presence without any ceremony. His presence was of course fraught with much pleasure to the entire household.

—On Wednesday Robert Harris (colored) and a young Hunter were arrested on information furnished to Chief of police Garis for stealing about eight gallons of blackberry brandy and sherry out of the cellar of Keplinger & Co's drug store. The evidence against him was overwhelming, inasmuch as some of the wine and empty bottles were found. In default of bail Harris was committed to jail. Young Hunter furnished bail for his appearance at court.

—On Wednesday, June 24th, Mr. William Jones, of the First National Bank, in this place, celebrated his 71st birthday. Mr. Jones has been an attache of the First National for many years and has filled his position there in a most acceptable and trustworthy way. Indeed, he has become a fixture, a part of the bank, and the stockholders would as soon think of parting with some of their cash as with Mr. Jones. May he live to celebrate many more birthdays.

—The mountain house, at Cresson opened on Tuesday. All trains will stop there during the summer season except Keystone Express and Columbian Express. New York and Chicago Limited Express, East and West will stop at Cresson only when there are passengers to get on or off at that point. The Observation car will be run on the rear of the Pacific Express West and Day Express East, between Altoona and Cresson, giving the passengers on these trains a good opportunity to see the scenery while passing over the mountain.

—On Friday the "Owl" descried the NEWS and blamed us with pilfering a subject for an article which they claim to have stereotyped, copyrighted, or something of the kind. We would just like to quietly inform the uptown news slingers that the DAILY NEWS was the first paper in Centre county to publish anything in regard to the subject mentioned, and it was the "Owl" that did the pilfering from this paper. However, we won't quarrel about such trifles; you can have the subject from this time henceforth and you can have the entire society to which you are vainly striving to gain entrance.

— How any body could sit down facing two tempting looking dishes of ice cream this hot weather without so much as tasting it surpasses our comprehension. Nevertheless two individuals of dusky complexions, recently entered an ice cream parlor at this place, gave the order for cream then after glaringly gazing at each other a few minutes, took their departure silently, the gent paying for the cream as he went. Certainly the course of true love did not run smooth between the swain, or things would not have been thus. The amusement of the other occupants of the parlor was considerable.

SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT.

ST. JOHN'S SCHOOL HOLDS CLOSING EXERCISES WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

Garman's opera house was handsomely decorated and well filled by a fashionably dressed audience to witness the entertainment to be given by St. John's school. The curtain went up at 7.45 revealing the stage occupied by about 150 boys and girls who sang the opening chorus exceedingly well and in good time. The second piece rendered was a motion song for which Master Ira Garman played the accompaniment. Following is the programme as rendered in full;

Garman—Savage.

On Wednesday evening the bride and groom Mr. Will Garman and wife, arrived in Bellefonte and are now stopping at Mr. Daniel Garman's on High street. Will's marriage was somewhat of a surprise to some of his friends. On Saturday evening he departed for New York ostensibly to purchase goods for the store in which he is a partner, but in reality for a far different purpose.

He there met a certain young lady well known in Bellefonte, Miss May C. Savage. On Tuesday morning at 8.30 o'clock, a select party consisting of the young lady's friends assembled in the church of the Holy Trinity on Madison Avenue, N. Y., and there the marriage ceremony was performed which made Mr. Garman and Miss Savage man and wife, the Rev. Walfold Warren officiating. From New York the wedding party proceeded to Southington Conn., the young lady's home, where an elegant dinner was served. From there the bride and groom returned to Philadelphia where they spent Tuesday night, returning to Bellefonte on Wednesday. We extend to the happy couple our heartiest congratulations.

Decorate Your House.

The fourth of July decoration committee request us to urge upon everybody in Bellefonte the importance of decorating their houses on Independence Day. Decorate them handsomely and well; and not only decorate your houses but render all assistance possible to the committee in placing proper decoration on the streets. Chairman Gramley informs us that the committee will commence decorating on Wednesday, the first of July. Now let everybody fall in and render the committee all possible aid.

May be Held in Bellefonte.

A effort is to be made to have the next democratic State Convention held in Bellefonte. The committee were to have met to-day to determine on the time and place but for some reason the meeting was postponed one week. It will therefore be held next Thursday and at that time influence will be used in favor of this place. It is to be hoped that the Convention may de brought here as it would give some democratic spirits a chance to get purified in this bracing mountain air.

New Rules For The Carriers.

On July 1 the letter carriers will be furnished with new blank report sheets, which are expected to simplify and lighten their work very materially. At present the carriers are required to fill out a report giving the exact number of letters delivered and carried by them on their routes, which requires from twenty minutes to a half hour each trip. The new blanks require a memorandum, stating the amount of time consumed in covering the route, and as the carriers are entitled to pay for every minute of extra time, the order of things will doubtless meet with their approval.

Harry Clay Kinsel.

On Monday last Harry Clay Kinsel was laid to rest in the cemetery of this place. Young, strong, hopeful, he had encouraged all who knew him to associate him with future deeds in the years to come. Therefore, none who knew him but feels a disappointment and a sorrow. Harry C. Kinsel was born July 4, 1867. His early boyhood was spent at Loveville, Centre county, where many who were his playmates and fellows recall, along with the vigor and avidity of his sports, the gentleness and spontaneous boyish courtesy of his conduct. It cannot be forgotten by those who knew him, that Harry Kinsel in his playhood never suggested a pastime that would incur cruelty upon his associates, he never urged a game that was coarse. It was an inherent quality of heart that he discriminated between meanness and fun, between grossness and mirth.

In the recent years of his youth and young manhood he had lived with his grandfather, the late James Love, not far from Tyrone. Here he has been recognized and esteemed by all who knew him, as a young man of promising intellectual qualities and rare qualities of heart. His young friends can truthfully say of Harry Kinsel what cannot be said of many: "We have n thing to lay to his charge."

During the year 1889-1890 he attended Pennsylvania State College, where he pursued studies in civil engineering. In his work in college he showed a bright mind and an earnest purpose. He was a favorite among his fellows, and his stalwart presence attracted attention in the class room as well as did his strong figure on the athletic field.

Harry was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church of Tyrone. In this day of absorbing worldliness and sordid materialism among young men, the life of Harry Kinsel furnishes a salutary example of the beauty of manly Christian character. In the making of his life plans he counseled with himself: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his rightcousness." How well he planned! He blended manly strength and actuating life ambitions with gentle grace of character and inspiring hope of the richest crown.

At the time of his death Mr. Kinsel was in Georgia. Here, during his last sickness, he was kindly cared for by friends of the family, and attended by the most eminent medical skill. About two weeks ago he fell a victim to what eventually proved a fatal sunstroke. Unwilling to inflict the anxiety and pain which the report of his condition would give his friends at home, he stoutly refused to allow the intelligence to be sent, and with his little strength wrote two letters to his family. After several days of hope waxing and waning but gradually fading on the part of his attendants, the sad news of his death came. At the death of Harry all of his acquaintances share their dole of grief, and desire to express their sympathy with the family in their sad loss and affliction.

The writer is glad to be able, from a life-long acquaintance, to testify to the excellent traits of Mr. Kinsel's character and conduct. These lines are a humble tribute to unselfish merit.

Why his earthly friends have been deprived of him, we may not know; why it was not given him to set ablaze before the eyes of men the purpose he was kindling, we may not understand; why the blossoming hopes of his life were not allowed to attain fruition, we may inquire; but one thing we do not doubt, our loss is his gain. He came in off the winning path of life, baring his brow to the command of a voice he loved to hear, took to himself the escutcheon of a nobler family and entered better fields; he has escaped the blazing noonday sun and the damp, chilly evening. R.

Swindlers in Blair County.

Nicholas Lewis, one of Sinking Valley's prosperous farmers, had an expensive experience with slick lightning rod agents yesterday. On Wednesday two smooth-tongued travellers stopped at Mr. Lewis' house and entered with him into a contract by which they as representatives of the "National Copper Tube Co," were to furnish lightning rods for his dwelling house. They agreed to furnish 75 feet free of charge and estimated the total cost of the work to be $6, but the contract was slyly worked "65 cents per foot for as much as it takes."

Yesterday another oily individual appeared, and astounded Mr. Lewis by demanding advance payment by note of $290, which he said would be the total cost of putting up the rods. Mr. Lewis naturall demurred and the persistent agent then suggested a compromise by which Mr. Lewis should give him $75 and get no rods at all. By dint of smooth talking he finally succeeded in obtaining from the bewildered farmer $25 in cash and a note for $45. Satisfied with his work, the agent then departed.

Mr. Lewis came to town to-day and notified the Tyrone and Altoona banks not to accept the note. With the publicity gained by publication of the fraud in the Blair county newspapers, it is hoped that no trouble will be occasioned by the making of the note.—Tyrone Herald.

A Band of Desperadoes.

PITTTBURG, June 23.—The notorious Frank Cooley and his gang are renewing their depredations in Georges township at the foot of the mountains in Fayette county. Cooley escaped from the Fayette county jail some time ago, where he was held pending his transfer to the penitentiary for burning and torturing a maiden lady named Miss Rose. He escaped and ever since has been terrorizing Hydetown and vicinity, levying tribute on farmers and holding up strangers. His last crime was to rob a church. Several warrants are out for his arrest, but the Uniontown officers frankly say they will not risk their lives for the petty reward offered. The Cooley gang number ten and they have powerful friends who warn them of officers coming when they hide in the mountains, where a regiment could not find them.

A Social Gathering.

On Wednesday evening quite a select party was given at the home of Ex-Governor Curtin on high street. About sixty guests were present among whom were Miss McCormick, Miss Halderman and Miss Simonton, with their brothers; and Mrs. Gross and Mrs. A. Wilson Norris, all of Harrisburg. The party was given in honor of the two young friends of Miss Kate Harris, Miss *Mc*Clay, of Milroy, and Miss Close, of Michigan. Mr. George N. Brandon was present and furnished some delightful music on the piano. Elegant refreshments were served and the party was said to be the most elegant of the season.

ELIXIR OF LIFE AND HEALTH.
is one that promotes digestion, improves the appetite, cleanses the liver, purifies the blood, and stimulates brain and nerves without injurious reaction, and one that may be taken alike by adult or infant. Profane compounds, made of vile rum or bad whiskey, sweetened and flavored, under the titles of bitters, tonics, &c., produce effects far worse than the disease for which they are taken
Vinegar Bitters is a pure tonic, a nervine without being narcotic, a purifier without poison, a liver tonic without purging, and above all, a life-giving stimulant without alcohol. The only medicine with such powers in the world.
A GENUINE TEMPERANCE BEVERAGE, far surpassing alcohol in any shape as a tonic it might be called LIQUID LIFE,
since it stimulates, invigorates and regulates digestion, nutrition, secretion, excretion, respiration, and all the functions whereby life is maintained—we literally take in vitality in spoonfuls,
It is too much to assert that the equal of Vinegar Bitters does not exist, as no counterpart or compound with similar virtues has ever been known
CALIFORNIA,
If remarkable for nothing else, would be immortalized by the production of the medicinal fruits roots and herbs of which this Bitters is composed. Many of them used by the Indians and the medical profession in the treatment of chills and fevers rheumatism, catarrh, consumption, neuralgia headaches, liver complaint, kidney disease, jaundice, boils, skin diseases, &c., &c., too numerous to mention, but easily understood when the action of the Bitters on the vital functions is remembered. —Special meeting of Gregg Post this evening. Every member is urged to be in attendance.

—Mr. Ed. Butts, has passed his examination at the College and can be spoken of now as a full fledged Junior.

—A "tally ho" party went to the State College on Tuesday afternoon to be present at the Junior oratorical contest in the evening.

—Quite a large and extremely social party was given last evening by Miss Anna Sechler in honor of her guest, Miss Anna Thickthorn.

—A number of surrounding towns are going to have "big times" on the fourth, but none of them will come up to Bellefonte's big time.

—The Bellefonte school district statement is out and according to the figures thereon the district is only about fifty thousand dollars in debt.

—The Philadelphia Times is still of the impression that Hon. A. K. McClure will deliver the Commencement Address at State College on Thursday.

—One hundred dollars more are needed to defray the expense of the 4th of July celebration. Subscribe liberally and the amount will soon be raised.

—Everybody wants to patronize the Logan's festival in the court house yard on July 4th. Remember the proceeds are for the payment of the new steamer.

—Next week is the week of the G. A. R. encampment in Williamsport. There will surely be a large delegation of Bellefonters go down to take in the big time.

—The funeral of Mrs. Hayden, the lady who was found dead in bed on Friday morning, occurred this forenoon. Interment was made in the Catholic cemetery.

—It is said that the Huntingdon car works will be moved to Tennessee. It is to be hoped they wont as thus about four hundred men will be thrown out of employment.

—Twenty-five cents reward will be paid to any one discovering what has become of the race track and fair ground project. The finder must return the same in good order to this office.

—Rev. George Chamberlain, of Brazil, preached the baccalaureate sermon in the College chapel Sunday morning to a quite large audience. Rev. C. is a good talker and his sermon on Sunday was much appreciated by all who heard it.

LET THE EAGLE SCREAM.

BELLEFONTE'S FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION WILL BE A GALA DAY.

Hurrah for the 4th of July ! Bellefonte will witness one of the biggest times next Saturday that has ever been known in this town. All the arrangements are now mostly complete and we can safely promise all visiting people that they will be royally entertained and will witness one of the biggest times they ever saw in Centre county.

The general committee held its last regular meeting on Monday evening and completed all preliminary arrangements and also mapped out the following plan of forming the parade and also the following line of march, the head of the column to be formed on High street, right resting on Spring; the fire companies on North Spring, the Industrial parade on South Spring and the Fantastics on Thomas street. The position in line of parade to be as follows :

FIRST DIVISION.
Chief Marshall Spangler and aids,
State College Band,
Sheridan Troop, Capt. Jones Commanding,
Company B, of Bellefonte,
G. A. R. Posts.
SECOND DIVISION.
Clearfield Band,
Hope Hose and Engine Company,
Milton Military Band,
Miltonian Steam Fire Engine Company,
Zion Band,
Logan Steam Fire Engine Company,
Logan Hose Company, Jr's.
THIRD DIVISION.
Amateur Band,
Reliance Hose & Hook and Ladder Co.,
Good Will Hose Co.,
Curwensville Band,
Rescue Hook and Ladder Company,
Hand in Hand Hose Company,
Pleasant Gap Band.
Undine Hose Company,
Undine Junior's,
Coronet Hook and Ladder Truck.
FOURTH DIVISION.
Fantastics,
Industrial Parade,
Wheelmen's Club.

The line of march to be recommended to the Chief Marshall is as follows :

Form as above mentioned, High to Spring; Spring to Bishop; Bishop to Allegheny ; Allegheny to Linn ; Linn to Armour ; countermarch on Linn to Spring ; Spring to Lamb; Lamb to Thomas; Thomas to High ; High to Spring ; Spring to Logan ; Logan to Ridge ; Ridge to Bishop ; Bishop to Allegheny ; Allegheny to Diamond, and there disband.

Now let every person turn in this week and do their best to make the celebration a success in every way. See that the town, and especially your own homes, are properly decorated and let the people elsewhere know that Bellefonte has as much patriotism as any other town in the State.

Milesburg Mention.

The P. R. R. Co., are contemplating making extensive improvements in shifting the tracks to a new position at Milesburg depot.

Dispatcher Orvis, of Bellwood and operator Meyers and Winsloe, of Lloydsville, spent Sunday with us. They returned home on Monday morning on early train. Come again ; glad to see you.

Mrs. James McMullin is very ill at her home with slight hopes of her recovery. She has been bed fast for nearly a year. Much sympathy is felt for her family.

Judging from the appearance of some of the little children on a brek street in Central City, that are alloyed to run from early morn until late at night, it would be a great credit to their parents if they would keep them under their control and not allow them to be a pest to their neighbors. But when the example is set by the head of the family being on the street all the time and her children left to the care of her neighbors, it is a shame. Little children are one of God's greatest blessings.

Mrs. Clara Matthews, of Pittsburg is at the home of her father Mr. Jas. Bradley, of Milesburg.

4th Annual Meet.

To be held in Huntingdon, Pa., July 4th, 1891. The following is the programme :

1 o'clock, Grand Parade of Civic Societies and Secret Orders, wheelmen to head the procession.

3 o'clock P. M., Wheelmen visit Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory, where many interesting events will take place.

7 o'clock P. M. Hill Climbing Contest on Fifth Street Hill.

8 o'clock P. M., Lantern Parade and One Thousand Dollars worth of Fireworks.

Extend the invitation to all your Cycling Friends. (Bring your wheel).

Death of Godfrey Baisor.

The people of Halfmoon township, this county, are somewhat shocked over the very sudden death of Mr. Godfrey Baisor, which occurred there Monday evening about 8.30 o'clock. The aged gentleman was standing on the porch watching to see the cows come home when he suddenly fell over and in less than fifteen minutes he was dead.

Mr. Baisor was 79 years, 6 months and 3 days old. He leaves an invalid wife and four children, George, Catherine, Elizabeth and Leah, to mourn their loss. He has for many years been a consistent member of the Lutheran church. The funeral will occur to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock. Interment to be made at the Lutheran church at Centre lime.

Watchman please copy.

The G. A. R. Encampment.

The following circular letter will be of interest not only to the old soldiers, but all persons who expect to attend the approaching encampment at Williamsport :

Comrades :—The summer encampment of the department of Pennsylvania, G. A. R., will be held at this place, commencing Saturday July 11, 1891. On behalf of the posts of this city we extend you a cordial invitation to be present. The camp will be delightfully located on the grounds formerly used by the Third Brigade, National Guard. The site is a beautiful one, overlooking the city, with a fine grove of trees, and well watered by never failing springs of pure mountain water ; distant but a pleasant walk from the centre of the city. Everything conducive to the comfort and convenience of the visiting comrades will be arranged. The hotel accommodations are ample and at reasonable rates. To those encamping upon the grounds tents, fuel, water and straw will be furnished ; comrades availing themselves of the privileges of the camp are requested to bring blankets with them. The camp will be lighted with electricity.

Our city is easy of access from the north and west by the Philadelphia & Erie, Beech Creek, Northern Central and Pine Creek roads and their several connections; from the south and east by the Philadelphia & Erie and Philadelphia & Reading roads and all branches. Tickets will be issued at the usual excursion rates for encampmentt of the G. A. R. We promise you a hearty reception and a good time.

Williamsport is situated upon the West branch of the Susquehanna river, near the centre of the State, in a valley bounded by the Bald Eagle range on one side and spurs of the Alleghenies on the other ; it is noted for saw-dust, flood, patriotism and hospitality, and is an eligible place for holding conventions. Everything to delight an old soldier's heart and taste can be found ; even oysters on the half-shell in July ; ice water to soak the feet in and hot water for old soaks.

Will you kindly return enclosed postal promptly, giving number of comrades of your post who will attend the encampment, stating the number that will occupy tents in the camp, and number desiring accommodations at the hotel or boarding houses. Also notify this committee in advance of the encampment, if possible, the road and trains by which you will arrive.

A Happy Event.

Thursday evening the 18th inst, at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride in Moshannon, Mr. Cloyd L. Brennan, of Altoona and Miss Annie B. Lucas were united in holy matrimony by the Rev. W. W. Cadle, pastor of M. E. church. Many friends were present from Altoona, Bellefonte and the surrounding neighborhood. The bride was the recipient of many useful and valuable presents. Mr. and Mrs. Brennan left the next day for a trip to Washington and points east. Their future home will be in Altoona.

Hastings and Robirson.

CHESTER, June 28.—William I. Schaffer, who was the only delegate from this county, for General D. H. Hastings for the Gubernatorial nomination, left Chester tonight to visit the general at Bellefonte. The visit is in the interest of John B. Robinson for president of the State League of Clubs. There is a strong effort being made to get Centre county clubs to indorse Dalzell. Mr. Schaffer will try and keep General Hastings out of the fight.

Bridge Cases Decided.

In the cases of Clinton county vs L. R. Paup and E. T. Gallagher, in the Great Island bridges matter, Judge Mayer rendered his decision this morning, quashing the warrants and discharging the defendants. His honor's opinion is an able one, in strict accordance with the law, as applicable to the said cases, and as such cannot fail to meet with general approbation.

Letter List.

The following letters remain uncalled for at the Bellefonte post-office June 22, '91

Bergren, A. W. ; Blum, J. C. ; McClintic, Lloyd ; McClellan, L. H. ; McGowan, Mrs. ; Soska Andras ; Stefanik, M. ; Thompson, Hannah ;

When called for please say advertised.

FORECASTS FOR JULY.

Rev. Irl Hick's Prognostisations for Next Month's Weather.

New moon, central time, 5th, 9.58 p. m. ; first quarter, 13th, 11.29 p. m. ; full moon, 21st. 7.54 a. m. ; last quarter, 27th, 10.32 p. m.

As announced in June forecasts, storms starting in that month will spend the greater part of their force on July first and second. A natural result will be a shifting of air currents to westerly, with lower temperature on and about the 3rd and 4th. It will grow very warm and result in secondary storms on the 5th and 6th. New moon on afternoon of 5th will add to natural storm tendencies for at least 24 hours thereafter. Cooler air from west and north will follow about the 7th, 8th and 9th, giving partial respite from heat.

The 11th is the central day of a regular storm period. About the 10th it will grow very warm, increasing in heat during the 11th and into the 12th, or until gathering storm forces organize and move eastward. Storms at this time are almost sure to develop to the northwest, and move to southeast, attended by blacker clouds and greater bluster than the amount of rainfall. This will be true of all the disturbances of the month. The temperature may not change permanently, and the atmosphere may have repeated spasms of bluster and storminess, until after the moon's first quarter on the 14th. Expect about that time, though it may be of short duration, a gracious fall of temperature. About the 17th and 18th as much heat as we shall likely want will be restored to us, showing great tenacity of purpose to stay with us, although reactionary storm puffs may beat against it from the northwest about afternoons and evenings of the 17th and 18th. If any breathing spell at all it will follow immediately after these dates.

A storm period beginning about the 23rd insures an increase of heat for that and the days following. Equinox of Mercury falls on the 26th, with moon's last quarter on the 27th, which facts may cause us continuation of settled, unmitigated heat up to reactionary disturbances about the 29th. Storms, with some rainfall are likely about the 24th, 25th and 26th. The 29th and 30th ought to bring storm flurries and cooler atmosphere for July's closing hours. Much heat, with very marked falling off in general rainfall, may be expected for the month. Be prepared for such.

Bellefonte's Social Life.

Bellefonte has not been brighter or gayer for a long time than it is just at present. There are more strangers coming and going than usually migrate to Bellefonte. There are a greater number of socials, receptions, etc., than usual and all in all Bellefonte's social life is this season all that is desired. Of course there are a number of reasons for the present state of affairs, the town is becoming more widely celebrated. People everywhere are finding out that here live the most hospitable ; our climate is unsurpassed ; we have the purest water in the world ; that this is the birthplace of all the truly great men—in fact we have none of any other kind here. Several years ago there were a few ordinary persons lived in Bellefonte but it was too lonely for them and they migrated to Lock Haven and Tyrone. Bellefonte is the envy and admiration of many large cities, in fact it is the "keystone" of the state and everyday it is being more and more realized by the public at large.

The Siege of Sebastopol.

Last summer Harrisburg had an exhibition of "The Last Days of Pompeii ;" this year it is afflicted with a "too muchly" modernized exhibition of what the managers call the "Siege of Sebastopol." The scenery is immense—in size ; the siege consists of the killing of one spy, drilling of some very poorly drilled soldiers (?) ; a lot of specialties, such as bicycle riding, tumbling, rope walking, etc., the whole thing to close with the fall of the old castle, pulled down by ropes; and a display of fireworks. Of the entire display the biggest of all is the display of "cheek" the managers exhibit in perpetrating a thing like that on an unsuspecting public and calling the same a "show," when it is not even a second rate circus. The only thing genuine they seemed to have was a swarm of Jersey mosquitoes specially imported for the occasion to sap what little "blood" was left in those who were brave enough to venture inside the large enclosure. But there is some satisfaction in knowing what it is like.

Just Strikes Renovo—Council and All.

A paper cannot live where the town council sticks a notice on a china tree and the merchants do all their advertising on paper sacks. Some of them say that it does not pay to advertise. Why the devil did not they say so before we planted the Banner in this cursed one-horse town? Here we are with $500 worth of fine printing material and not enough business to furnish grub for a grasshopper. Guess we will not settle at another water tank with a lot of ignorant people. Unless we get some new advertisements this week the paper goes up the spout and we will leave this god-forsaken, measley town and open a bar at drunkard's Gulch and get rich.—Billtown (Ga.) Banner.

Many Were Poisoned.

NEWCASTLE, Pa., June 26.—A case of wholesale poisoning occurred at Pulaski, yesterday evening, that may prove fatal to several young men. In the afternoon a base ball nine from Youngstown, Ohio, played the local team, and the two clubs went to the Pulaski hotel for supper. An hour after supper several of the home team were taken seriously ill, and to-night the lives of two of them is despaired of. Several of the Youngstown players are also in a critical condition. It is supposed the tin foil around the dried beef eaten caused the poisoning.

Personal Pencilings.

Mr. Vance McCormick is visiting friends here.

Jno. P. Harris Jr. is home from Tyrone on a visit.

Mr. D. Bates Bell is spending a few days in Bellefonte.

Judge Furst held argument court in Huntingdon on Saturday.

Mr. Robt. Jackson is entertaining his brother, Mr. Wm. Jackson, of Philadelphia.

Clair Robert's is at this place spending his vacation after a studious term at Princeton.

Miss Lula McGee, of Williamsport is visiting at the home of Mrs. Henry Beck, of this place.

Mr. Thad. Longwell, with wife and two children are visiting Mr. Longwell's mother on Spring street.

Misses Kate and Anna Sanderson of Mill Hall, are visiting their aunt, Mrs. Geo. L. Potter, on Linn street.

Miss Emma Hughes, daughter of Prof. Hughes is circulating among her many friends at her home in this place after a long absense.

Mrs. Lane, mother of Mr. John Lane, celebrated her 71st birthday on Thursday. Mrs. Lane is a well preserved lady, still being hale and hearty.

The Rev. Speer departed yesterday for Northfield, Conn., where he will remain for two weeks. No service at Presbyterian church next Sunday.

General Hastings spent the Sabbath at his home in this place. By the way the General is looked to deliver the fourth of July oration at Lancaster.

Mr. Samuel Taylor, of Linden, Kans., has returned to his former home in this place. We learn it is the intention of Mr. Taylor to remain permanently in Bellefonte.

Mr. Thomas Yearick, ex-postmaster and one of the prominent merchants of Aaronsburg, came to Bellefonte on Tuesday and returned home to-day. This is Mr. Yearick's first trip to Bellefonte in four years.

Mrs. Benj. Rudy, of Canton, Ohio, a sister of Mrs. Isaac Haupt, accompanied by her young son, is at present in Bellefonte, where they will visit until Monday when they will return to their home in Ohio. Previous to their arrival in this place they had spent a very pleasant time with relatives in Millersville, Carlisle, and Hagerstown.

We have thus far omitted to mention the fact that Mr. George Schrock, of Akron, Ohio, but who was at one time one of the best employees in this office, with his charming wife is in Bellefonte on a visit, the first since he shook the dust of Bellefonte off of his feet and went west now more than three years ago. George dropped in on us on Tuesday and we find him the same George as of old. He will remain in Bellefonte until after the 4th and then he will return to his post of duty in the Werner printing house, Akron.

Mrs. D. K. Tate is entertaining at her home, her sister and two children, Mrs. L. A. Straub and Miss Marie and Dr. Effie, the family all being well known in Bellefonte having formerly resided here. Miss Effie is now a full fledged M. D., having studied medicine in Chicago and established a practice there. Her health becoming bad she journeyed east and has now somewhat recovered. She departed last week evening for Chicago. Her mother and sister will spend the summer in Bellefonte and then next fall will also journey west and locate with Miss Effie in her western home.

Business Men's Display.

Following is the list of business firms in Bellefonte who will participate in the Industrial parade on Saturday next :

Joseph Brothers, Shaeffer, photographer; Centre Democrat, Will Brackbill, Beezer's meat market, Bunnell & Aiken, Naginey, the furniture man ; C. Brown, Ed. Garman, H. A. McKee & Bro., W. T. Twitmire, Jenkins & Lingle, Swartz & Dubbs, Hoover & Miller, W. B. Maitland, J. F. Mongomery, McCalmont & Co., Racket Store Co., Chain Works, Stover's meat market, Mott's Marble Works, Waite & Co., Jas, Harris & Co., M. W. Cowdrick, Ed. Rhoads, W. T. Hillibish & Co., S. M. Buck, Jno. Bauer and Phoenix Plaining Mill.

—What a number of people there are in this world who never care to do any work but who are always ready and very willing to come in for a big slice of the glory of anything, while those who really do the work go unpraised and almost unknown.

A GREAT JAM YEAR.

Sugar is Cheap and Fruit Abundant and the Housewife is Accordingly Happy.

A great year for jams. What a picture the words conjure up for the housewife, and above all, for the small boy ! What a vision of groaning pantry shelves and of a lock that can be picked, and of boxes and chairs and books that bring the sweets within the urchin's reach ! And then, alas ! a more gloomy picture of racking pain behind the suspender buttons, and of ginger in big doses.

But it is a big year for preserves none the less, and millions of preserving jars are being cleansed and polished to wait the good time coming. Thanks to Providence and the McKinley bill, the conditions were never brighter. A warm sun and well timed rains started the blossoms and guarded the fruit so that the latter indispensible abounds this summer. This is what Providence has done, and as for the McKinley biil, it has knocked the duty ffo sugar .With fruit cheaper and sugar cheaper, what can the good wife further ask ?

The "Philadelphia Record" says : Manufacturers of fruit jars state that the demand for these articles this season is unprecedented, being at least three times greater than last year. This state of affairs has a tendency to advance rather than decrease the price of the jar, and the manufacturer accordingly rejoices.

Strawberries are nearly over, and large quantities have been put up for winter use. The cherry crop is also large and large quantities have been or are being preserved and canned. The raspberry crop is now coming in and promises equally as large a proportionate yield as do the blackberry crop to come later. The peach crop gives promise of being the largest for years in this section, and the price of good peaches is likely to be within the reach of all. Altogether the season will be unusually prolific of good fruit, and with cheap sugar ought to make the housewife glad.

—Major G. W. McCauley, who accompanied General Daniel H. Hastings at the out-of-door elsteddfod at Mountain Park, near Wilkesbarre, on Saturday, is an old Wilkesbarrean. He saw the first pick struck for the sinking of the Empire shaft along in the '50s. He is well versed in musical matters, and while in Wilkesbarre belonged to a male quartette that was locally famous. He left Wilkesbarre in 1861 as first sergeant in Company F of Colonel Harvey's regiment. From first sergeant Mr. McCauley was promoted to first lieutenant and to captain for bravery. At Fair Oaks he lost an arm, a rifle ball shattering it near the shoulder. It is said that, refusing all stimulants, he sang lustily "The Sword of Bunker Hill" while the surgeon was amputating the injured member.

—Harry Seibert, who has been head butcher for Gettig & Moore, has purchased I. L. McLarren's meat market, and took charge of the same this morning. Harry will be assisted in his labors by our jolly friend, Howard Matley, and the "Two Johns" will make things go around that place. Mr. McLarren will give his attention solely to the development of the fire clay recently discovered on his farm, in Clearfield county. The parties who have had charge of the prospecting report a nine-foot vein of good clay, lying within twenty-four feet of the surface. This is a lucky find for Isaiah, and we wish it may pan out big for him. All parties have our best wishes.—Philipsburg Journal.

—Every merchant and business man should be represented in the Industrial parade on July 4th. Don't let the matter of a little expense keep anyone out of the line. It will not only be a good advertisement but a proper showing for the town and a good way to contribute to the celebration. Not one man who put down his name should back out and every business man who has not already put down his name should do so at once and enter the parade next Saturday.

—Arrangements have been made for entertaining the Reliance Hook and Ladder Company of Philipsburg, which includes 60 firemen and band, at the Garman House, during their visit to Bellefonte on the fourth. We can assure the Reliance boys that they will get the very best of entertainment at this popular hotel. So far we have not heard of any other of the visiting companies being definitely placed.

Nine Hundred Men Strike.

ALLENTOWN, June 30.—Owing to the refusal of the Catasaqua Manufacturing company to accept the new scale of the Amalgamated association three of their mills have shut down. The old mill at Ferndale closed on Saturday, and the old mill at Catasaqua and the new mill at Ferndale closed this evening. Nine hundred employes are affected.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.
